PECKS' BAD BOY AND HIS PA.

He Breaks his Pa of Washing Female Clerks.

"What is this I hear about your father creating a panic in a dry goods store," said the groceryman to the bad boy, as he took a butter tryer and run it into a pumpkin a few times. "They tell me he had about a hundred female clerks trod on the shelves, and on the counters, and all of them screaming bloody murder, and that a floor walker hit him over the head with a roll of paper cambric, and somebody turned in a fire alarm. How was it?"

"Well, if you will keep watch for pa, at the door, I will tell you all about it," said the boy. "Somebody has told pa that I was at the bottom of the whole business, and when a man loses confidence in his boy, and rolls up a trunk strap and carries it habitually, it stands a boy in hand to keep his eye peeled. You see, pa has been in a habit lately of going to the store a good deal and lallygagging with the girl clerks. Any girl that will smile on pa, and look sweet, catches him, and he would sit on a stool in front of the counter ten hours a day, pretending to want to buy some fringe, or corsets, or something, and he would fairly talk the arm off the girls. Ma didn't like it at all, and she told pa he ought to be ashamed of himself, cause the girls was only making a fool of him, and all the people in the store were laughing at him, but pa said for her to shut her yawn, and he kept on trying to find excuses to go to the store. Ma told me about it, and she felt real sorry, and by jinks it made me mad to see an old man, old enough to have the gout or paralysis, going round and mashing clerks in a store, and I told ma if she would let me I would break pa up in that sort of business, and she told me to go ahead and make him jump like a box car. So 'tother day ma gave pa a piece of ribbon to match and a corset to change for a larger one, and a pair of gloves to return because the thumb of one of them ripped off, and told him to buy four yards of baby flannel, and see how much it would cost to have her seal-skin cloak relined, and to see if her new hat was done. Pa acted as though he didn't want to go to the store, but ma and me knew he looked upon it as a picnic, and he blacked his boots, and changed ends with his cuffs, and put on his new red necktie, and shaved himself, and fixed up as though he was going to be married. I asked him to let me go along to carry the packages, and he said he didn't mind if I did go. You have seen these itty rubber rats they have at the rubber stores, haven't you? They look so near like a natural rat that you can't tell the difference unless you offer the rubber rat some cheese. I got one of those rats and tied a fine thread to it, with a slipnoose on the end, and when pa got into the store I put the slipnoose over the hind button of his coat-tail, and put the rat on the floor, and it followed him along, and I swore it looked so natural that I wanted to kick it. Pa walked along smiling, and stopped at the ribbon counter, and winked at a girl, and she bent over to see what he wanted, and then she saw the rat, and she screamed and got up on the shelf where the boxes were, and she put her feet under her, and said, 'take it away, kill it,' and she trembled all over. Pa thought she had gone into a fit 'cause she was paralyzed on his shape, and he turned blue, and went on, 'cause he didn't want to kill her dead; and as he walked along the rat followed him, and just as he bowed to four girls who were standing together, talking about the fun they had at the exposition the night before, they saw the rat, and they began to yell and climb up things. One of them got on a stool and pulled her clothes tight around her ankles, so a live rat couldn't have got in her stocking, let alone a rubber rat, and the girls all squealed just like when you tickle them in the ribs. Pa he looked scared, as though he was breaking them all up with his shape, and he kept on, and another flock of girls saw the rat, and they jumped up on the counter getting up on things, and saying 'shoo,' and one of them got on a pile of blankets, and the pile fell off on the floor with her, and the men had to dig her out. Pa's face was a study. He looked at one girl and then another, and wondered what was the matter, and finally the floor walker came along and see what it was, and he took pa by the collar and led him out of doors, and he told him if he ever came in there again he would send the police after him. I had gone by the time pa got out on the sidewalk, and he picked up the rubber rat and found that it was hitched to his coat, and he went right home. Ma says he was so mad that he stuttered, and she thinks I had better board around for a day or two. She tried to reason with pa that it was intended for his good, to show him that he was making a fool of himself, but he does not look at it in that light. Say, do you think it was wrong to break him up that way? He was going wrong entirely."

"O, I don't know. You and your ma are the best judges. But I would have liked to see them girls climbing up the side of the store."

A MISSION IN TROUBLE.—

The Gaboon mission in West Africa falls into increased perplexity. When the French took possession of the country, announcement was made that no schools should be carried on without special permission of the French authorities. Now the trouble has gone further. An order has been issued that the schools shall use no other language than the French, and that half of the time of the negro pupils shall be spent in learning French. The missionaries are American Presbyterians, who have no knowledge of French. To add to the embarrassment of the missionaries, the French refuse to receive any communications except those which are written in French. The French language has not hitherto been taught at the theological seminaries where missionary students are prepared for the African work. If this sort of thing continues, that language will have to be a part of the regular training for equipment as a missionary. The effect of the new system has been to break up the Gaboon schools and to drive the pupils for temporary refuge to the homes of the missionaries.

There is a religious miner out in Arizona, who, though industrious, was uniformly unlucky. He was reading his Bible one day not long ago while sitting on the edge of a precipice. Dropping asleep, the Bible fell down to the bottom of the precipice. When he climbed down to it, he saw that it was lying open and that a bit of quartz was lying directly over the verse, "Ask and it shall be given unto you; seek and ye shall find." Taking this as a Divine intimation, he began seeking very diligently and soon found a ledge which was very rich in gold. He is now unable to decide whether it was reading the Bible or going to sleep that brought him his good fortune, but, on the whole, is inclined to think that hereafter he will be able to get along with less Bible.—N. Y. Tribune.

A country editor, after writing a powerful and exhaustive article on the earthquake in Java, from force of habit wound up with: "Let the strictest official inquiry be made into this terrible loss of life, and let not the guilty heads escape that punishment a horror-stricken, outraged community demands." And glowing with the loftiest indignation, he strode over to the corner place and drank a whisky "straight" without winking—until he told the man to charge it.—Richmond Baton.

John L. Sullivan, on being interviewed, said: "We shall go through to San Francisco and Oregon, returning over the Northern Pacific. During the trip every man who wants to meet me with the gloves can have a chance, and those who want to redeem themselves can never have a better show, for I will offer $250 to anybody who will, during the trip, meet me at sparring and stand up during four rounds."
