AN EXCITING COURT SCENE

Singularly Dramatic Incident .. Fined for Giving the Old Rebel Yell.

(Macon (Ga.) Telegraph and Messenger, 1 A singularly dramatic incident occurred Friday near midnight in the superior court-room at Waynesboro, during the trial of the Rogers brothers for the killing of the Symses—father and son. The killing occur-ed at McBean's stat on in October last. bundles his manuscript into a drawer Eminent counsel had been engaged by the prosecution and defense, for both Although his appearance is so ponderparties were prominent and wealthy. The evidence closed and the speaking began Friday morning, continuing all aisles within the bar were crowded with ladies, while without a dense throng of began his argument at 8 o'clock. Twiggs is an eloquent speaker, practired in and noted for his oratorical graces. In the course of his three hours' address he at one time referred in the most feeling manner to the courage and devotion of women. The hour, the occasion, the audience, and the dim light, from which the rapt faces were bent upon him, all combined to form a closed his address upon the women as follows:

"At the battle of Gettysburg Gen. Pickett was ordered to begin the charge which was to make him famous. As he went into the terrible battle his young bride on horseback followed him. When the hail of death was beating down men on all sides, and the plunging shot and shell mingled their fierce screams with the moans and cries of the mangled. Pickett suddenly found himself in the presence of his wife. In an agony of fear for her safety he cried out to her as she sat cool and collected as a veteran, 'Go back! Go back! For God's sake go back to the rear!' 'No,' replied the devoted woman, 'in the hour of danger a wife's place is by her husband's side."

At this moment through the courtroom there rang out one wild, thrill-ing cry which nearly lifted the excited throng to its feet. It was the old rebel yell, heard upon a hundred battle fields and never to be forgotten. A deep sirence followed. All eyes were turned toward the outer circle. Then Judge Roney's cold voice was heard bidding the sheriff to arrest the offender. A man was seen dodging through the crowd, and the judge continued: "The man who is leaving is probably the one wanted."

"No. judge," exclaimed a voice slowly,
"I am the man." The speaker stood in the aisle with folded arms, quietly consemplating the bench.

"I shall have to fine you $10, then, for disturbing the court."

"Very well, your honor, I will pay the money," said the man without moving, "but I meant no disrespect. I was a Confederate soldier at Gettysburg, and just could not help from hollering." The ladies present sprang to their feet, and in an instant the money was made up and paid to the clerk. The involuntary yell of the old soldier was an irresistable tribute to womanhood. Had the fine been ten times as large he would not have suffered.

When he has become a competent pastry cook he is taught to make sauces and dressings. From this time on he gradually learns the various branches, and if fortunate he may become a chef after working for ten years at the art. Then he presides at the head of some establishment, but his work is still of the most ardnous nature unless he be chef in a private family.

"In a hotel, restaurant or large club, he has the following assistants: Second cook, roast cook, cold meat cook, first butcher, second butcher and night cook. Nearly every wealthy family in French cities has its chef.

"In Paris no establishment with any pretensions is without this functionary. There many gentlemen give their chefs a certain amount of money out of which they are to farnish the table and retain the balance. This incites them to economize. Others pay a salary which amounts to 5,000 francs in many instances-a sum which will go very far in that sunny land. Besides, there are often perquisites attached to the office. "In this country a number of families have imported French cooks, and the larger hotels and restaurants have had them for many years. But the chefs in private families are very few compared with the great number of affluent people here.

A Colorado Litterateur. [Chicago News.]

Col. Ward Lamon, who announces that his second volume of the "Life of Lincoln" will be published very shortly, does his literary work between the hours of 2 and 5 in the morning. You never catch him at work. He seems to have a strange, superstitious dread of being seen with a pen in his hand. When he is writing and hears anybody approaching, he quickly ous and his movements so slow as to impress one with the suspicion that he is lazy, he is as busy a man as you during the day. When the court could find in the whole state of Colo-a-sembled after tea the seats and the rado. He is passionately fond of reading of all kinds, and his literary knowledge covers every school and style and men filled up the auditorium. It was variety of literature. He has a won-before this assembly that Mr. Twiggs derfully retentive memory, which retains dates and names and stories with remarkable accuracy. He talks most entertainingly, and his rooms in Denver ere the popular rendezvous for those who delight in anecdote and reminiscence. Instead of keeping his library in cases or on shelves, he has his books piled on the floor of his apartments. One hundred volumes of reference are placed in a revolving rack which stands surrounding well calculated to inspire close at his writing-desk. He is a great the orator to his greatest effort. He hand at quotations, and when puzzled by visitors for the source of some line he gives his book rack a slow twirl and reaches out for the volume which contains the desired information. He is altogether a remarkable and admirable character in his way.

The Philosophy of Bread and Butter.

[Philadelphia Press.] We spread butter upon bread because that is the best way of eating both bread and butter, and they are both good when of first-class quality. Our palates revolt at butter straight, but when united with the bread it renders the latter less absorbent of moisture, and, therefore, less dry in the month and lubricates its passage to the stomach, making the eating of it an easy and pleasant process, whereas dry bread is hard to take, and is specially reserved as a primitive diet for unruly convicts and naughty children.
