AN ABLE SPEECH.

Hon. John Myers Talks to the People of Lane County.

According to previous notice, Hon John Myers, Democratic candidate for Congress, addressed the people of Eugene City and vicinity last Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Court House was comfortably filled with voters to hear the gentleman. Music was furnished by the Eugene City Brass Band. In a few timely remarks commending the gentleman to the people of Lane, Hon R B Cochran introduced the speaker.

HON. JOHN MYERS.

Mr Myers said the nomination for the important position came to him unsought and without any effort on his part. He said further that he was engaged in two pursuits—farming and merchandising. In fact he had sown nearly acres of grain from a sack sown around his neck this season. As far as oratory was concerned he said the people would be sadly disappointed if they expected to hear a fluent and eloquent speech, but he intended to talk plainly and honestly to the producing element of the country. He said he was sorry his opponent was not present but it was no fault of his, as Mr Herman had been invited to take part, but on account of being afraid of certain embarrassing questions concerning his party and himself had wisely concluded to "go it alone."

The first subject Mr Myers spoke upon was the forfeiture of the unearned railroad land grants. He gave a complete history of Hon J H Slater's bill in Congress, favoring the forfeiture of the Astoria and Walla Walla grants, which was opposed by Dolph, a railroad vice-president and attorney, and also by that hiring of the corporations, M O George, who was born and raised in Oregon and who should naturally have the interests of the people at heart. He said it was an impossibility for any Republican in Congress to oppose corporate powers, as the party in Oregon relied upon that power for its success. I am in favor of giving the railroads all the land earned, and obliging them to sell it at not more than government prices, but instead the Northern Pacific is charging settlers as high as $200 per acre in Eastern Washington and Oregon. I believe in assisting railroads when the public will be benefited by such assistance, and then in restricting their charges. Those who want to examine my record in the State Senate will find me always voting upon the people's side. I believe the poor man has just as much right to a piece of the public domain as the millionaire. If now the people of Oregon refuse to sustain Senator Slater by neglecting to send a helper to the House, they will lose a chance of helping, not me, but themselves. Next he took up the subject of freight and fares. Freight should pay by the mile, and no discriminations in favor of places should be allowed. I have always worked against such discriminations. I commenced to fight this when Ben Holladay first began to build his road through this beautiful valley. I am not talking against the masses of the Republican party, but its leaders. He stated that the Portland Republicans defeated the Clow bill in the Legislature. Herman was created by the Portland ring and would not dare to oppose them if he should happen to be elected. On the subject of the improvement of harbors, rivers, etc. he stated that if elected he would work for all portions of the State, and not solely for Portland as the Republicans sent to Congress have done in the past. He spoke in favor of the Oregon Mortgage Tax Law, and said he had had the pleasure of voting for the bill in the Legislature, and believed its provisions to be wise and the correct thing. He made a severe denunciation of Judge Deady's action in interfering with the judgment of the State courts. The Republicans as well as the Democrats had declared in favor of a registry law. To show their inconsistency he gave a short history of the Hendricks registry bill before the Legislature. It was referred to a committee in the Senate, of which Jos Simon, a Radical leader was chairman, when the deed was broken open by some Portland Republican in the same stolen. In the House every Democrat had voted for the bill, and all but two or three Republicans against it. Now they were trying to make the people believe that they are in favor of an honest ballot. Both parties on this coast, he stated, are against the Chinese labor, but in the East the Republicans favored the heathens against the workmen. The Journal in this city had stated that the Democrats nominated that he was unfit for the position. He thought that no Republican had a right to talk of a person being unfit when such a man as Herman was nominated on the other side, who was not even competent to fill a position in the State Legislature creditably. He had also seen it stated in Republican papers that he had voted for the bill contracting prison labor. When that bill was before the Senate he had risen and spoken against the principle of using the labor of the prisoners to compete with mechanics, but as the officers of the State showed it absolutely necessary to raise revenue in that way, he had amended the bill making the wages of the prisoners 40 instead of 25 cents, and then hesitatingly voted for the bill. He was not ashamed of any record he had made during his long service in the State Legislature. He next stated that he was opposed to National Banks, as he believed that if the country needed paper money, the government ought to issue it direct, thus doing away with one of the damnable corporate powers. The next subject spoken upon was the tariff. He admitted that he did not understand this question very well, but he was confident that he was better posted upon it than Herman, who did not have any understanding of it whatever. Herman had told the farmers through the valley that their wheat was protected twenty cents per bushel. Who ever heard of a bushel of wheat being imported into this country. We depend entirely upon the Liverpool market for selling our grain. If Herman had made no other propositions, this one would have shown him to be the laboring man's fool. Also that the lumber and coal of Oregon was protected to keep out the Britishers. What ridiculous propositions! When we can produce the above articles cheaper than any country in the world. Mr Myers said he was in favor of a persistent pruning down of the tariff, as he believed it would be of benefit to all concerned. If it was not done there would only be one question before the American people and that would be the tariff, and if present parties did not make the reform new parties would certainly spring up. However, he was confident the Democratic party, the party of the people, in a short time would give the people the reform needed. The present pernicious tariff had only one effect and that was to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. Protection has utterly failed to benefit American labor. Under it the wages of labor, both skilled and unskilled, have dropped. Laborers can buy less with a dollar now than under low tariff, but the profits of the manufacturers are from 21 to 67 per cent per annum. The claim of the benefit of Republican legislation to the wool producers is a delusion. They took the ad valorem tariff off of wool and raised the tariff on woolen goods. America can cope with every country in the world if she is given a chance, in production, in commerce, and if need be at the point of the bayonet. I am no lawyer or orator, but only speak my earnest convictions. What my conscience dictates as right between man and man I favor. There is no policy about it. If I thought I could win votes to-day by a stroke of policy I would not do it. My sympathies are with the laboring class, and I recognize the fact that there has never been a time during many years when they were so poor as now. This wrong, is chiefly the result of Republican legislation. Every interest in the country has a large number of Representatives in Congress, while there is only fifteen farmers in the House. The farmers, the main support of the government, should look to their interests and send men to Congress who will labor for them.

In conclusion he stated he would overhaul Herman's political history a little, as that gentleman had claimed to have so high a regard for the purity of his party. In 1872 Mitchell "kicked" the gentleman out of the Roseburg land office, and shortly thereafter we find Mr Herman bolting the party and becoming one of the leading members of the Independent party, declaring the Republican party too corrupt to associate with. The question in my mind is, whether the party was too corrupt or corrupt. It was at least very queer by a man who had been taking nourishment from the public pay for years to bolt for the sole reason of being deprived of it. The Republican candidate refused to affiliate with the "morality party" until 1882, when he appeared upon the arena again, wanting office.

REGULAR

From the Banner Precinct.

RICHARDSON PRECINCT, May 16, 1884.
EDITOR GUARD.—This report is being spread that certain leading Democrats of Long Tom precinct, are using their influence to defeat Hon J J Walton for County Judge. The parties thus spoken of positively deny ever having expressed themselves in any such way, and further state their intention to support Mr Walton, knowing him to be in every way calculated to fill the position, and believe the above report to be the work of the opposing party in the vain hope of securing to their candidate a few votes. The fact is just this: If the remaining precincts of Lane county are as well pleased with the entire ticket as are Richardson, Long Tom and Junction, there will not be a man lost. It is true that the youth and inexperience of one or two is slightly objected to, yet they have lived long enough to secure to themselves a perfect education, and that is equally great, the entire trust and confidence of all to whom they are known.

COBURG, May 22, 1884.

Politics on a boom, and Walton ahead.

The umpire says Tol Rhinehart is too fat to play ball.

The boys say that nigger can't sing, but golly how he can dance.

The boys have organized a base ball club here. It is rumored that the "Plow-boys" will meet the University "Nine" the 7th of June. Look out boys, they are coming.

John Long says that he threw a ball a mile high last Sunday. But that's nothing; he is the same man who left the plow running all night and didn't know it.

Skinner, Long & Co are doing a good business here with the saw mill. They have a good quality of lumber on the yard and are ready at all times to make a bargain.

The candidates met here last Saturday and discussed the political issues of the day. It was a success for the Democratic aspirants, but our Republican brethren say that "it looks like they could have found some better speakers on the Republican side for the Legislature." It does look so.

The Coming History.

The enterprise of collecting, preserving and presenting in an enduring form facts and incidents connected with the history of Lane County, is one that should pre-eminently commend itself to the favor and support of our people, for here shall we have a record that each and all should feel proud in perpetuating, and one that will bear the brunt of time and hand down in tangible shape the honored names of our pioneers. Mr Walling, ably assisted by his staff of collectors and compilers, have undertaken every success. It might be mentioned that we had a call from Mr J P M Fraser, on Tuesday last, whose special duty will be the writing of the history, and who will be glad to place himself in communication with any and all who may wish to impart to him the knowledge of which he is in search. This gentleman, who has five years experience in history writing in California, was long associated in that state with both Col Alley and Mr Fagan.

FOURTH OF JULY.—The Fourth of July will soon be along, and it is about time for our citizens to be thinking about celebrating this National holiday in a becoming manner. In several of our exchanges we notice that active steps have already been taken for this worthy object, notices appearing therein for public meeting, to appoint committees for the purpose of providing ways and means etc. For several years Eugene City has had celebrations which passed off very creditably. We would suggest that a Citizen's meeting be called at an early day, committees appointed, money subscribed etc.

ANNA PATTERSON, EDITOR.

The University of Berlin has 250 professors.

The class in Geology commenced reviewing last week.

Minnie Yoran signed the constitution at the last meeting of the Eutaxians.

Ought not the juniors have the same vacation as the seniors?

B B Beekman has been absent from school during the past week on account of illness.

Osie Walton, Nellie Coleman and Bettie Day have been spending this week in Astoria.

The Alexandrian Society held its closing meeting last Friday evening and disbanded, not to meet again until next year.

Sherman Davis and his brother Henry, of Silverton, both former Laureans, paid this city and the University a visit one day this week.

Prof Gantebein's French class have finished their examination in "Le Cid" and commenced "Le Misanthrope."

The names of Ada Sharples and Fannie and Clara Condon were proposed for membership in the Eutaxian society last Friday.

Several supposed Laureans and Eutaxians were out serenading one evening this week. The recipients of their music were very pleasantly entertained.

State Superintendent McElroy visited the University last week during his stay in this city. He is making arrangements for a State Institute to be held at Salem, commencing June 30th.

The Annalsists wish to announce through the columns, that they are now ready to receive at their respective sanctums, all jokes and items concerning any member of the societies. Complimentary puffs given in exchange.

The exercises in the auditorium last Friday were unusually interesting. Clara Adams presented a well written essay entitled, "Where Rolls the Oregon?" Emily Bristol gave an interesting description of the "Life and Character of Charlotte Bronte;" S S Spencer delivered an oration on "Monarchies," which was equally well received.

Next Friday the Eutaxians debate the question, "Resolved, That our Liberties are Endangered by Foreign Influence." The affirmative will be supported by Kate Powell, Hattie Smith, Maggie Staushury and Emily Bristol; the negative by Mary Potter, Elta Moore, Kate Parker and Bettie Shaw.

A certain Eutaxian on her way home from school one day last week, lost her sole and in despair, contemplated suicide by jumping into the mill race. But a Ladreau coming along about this time, by his words of cheer so consoled her troubled spirit, that she abandoned her attempt and is still with us.

"Resolved, That the High Schools Should be Supported at the Public Expense," was debated by the Eutaxians last Friday afternoon. The chair rendered her decision in favor of the affirmative. The Laureans debated the same question in the evening but we have been unable to ascertain how the decision was rendered.

Yesterday evening the Laureans gave an open session. H S Johnson read an essay and W C Taylor delivered a recitation. The question, "Resolved, That the Spiritual Supremacy of the Pope during the Dark Ages was a blessing rather than a Curse," was debated. O P Coshaw led the affirmative and J M Carroll the negative.

Only two more weeks of study and one of examination, then a long tiresome year's work will be completed. These few weeks will seem ages to the toilsome student; but when the last lessons are recited, how pleasant it will be to lay aside our finished books, high upon some shelf or far away in some remote corner, knowing that next year we will not have to carry those same books back and forth to the University. It reminds us of ancient college custom of which we have read and which is a feature of many leading colleges and universities of America; called the "Bourdon burial," celebrated by the Freshmen upon completing their examination in Algebra. Louis Bourdon was the author of a French Algebra, which had been translated and introduced into the American colleges some years ago, as a mathematical drill for the Freshmen, and from the author's name were the burial services called. This book is the terror and dread of the Freshmen and upon completing it they feel that some celebration is befitting the event. So the custom of holding a mock funeral grew up among them. A solemn funeral procession, preceded by a sable catafalque bearing a volume of Bourdon, incased in a costly casket, paraded the streets and the solemn rites of burial are accorded it. As the Freshmen are not allowed by their masters, the Sophomores, to venture out of their rooms after night fall, the Freshmen must use all caution and strategy in their nocturnal celebration, and the Sophomores do all in their power to prevent them from holding their services. We think that at the close of the year many a student will own a time worn book which he may think deserves such a disposal at this.

But we are happy to say that, although many of these old customs may be harmless, they have not yet invaded the peace of our fair institution, where the sub-Freshmen feels himself on quite as responsible a footing as the Senior, and where a higher class feels no malice or superiority over a lower one.

The Smiling Seniors Are Sweetly Surprised.

[This item should have appeared two weeks ago, but being "piled," we were unable to produce it until the present time.—Ed GUARD.]

On Wednesday evening of last week the seniors met with their classmates, Caspar Sharples, in class meeting. After all necessary business was transacted and they began to look for their hats, Mrs Sharples appeared upon the scene and requested that she might speak. The privilege granted; she announced, much to the surprise of the class, that she had a little matter in the dining room to which she would like to call their attention. As all became "too full for utterance," they could only learn that it was "one of the nicest little suppers they had ever sat down to;" that among the many viands two large cakes, dedicated to the "class of 1884," sat, one at each end of the table; that at the close of the supper the President of the class made a little speech expressing, in behalf of the class, their pleasure and gratitude for the treat, and that all went away in a jolly good humor, some to count on the possibilities of another surprise, and some to wrestle with nightmare until the small hours of morning. Suffice it to say they were not all in school next day.

IRVING, May 22, 1884.

J P Zundwalt and J M Kitchen have formed a partnership in the gardening business, and wish to say to the surrounding towns that they will supply them with plenty of spuds and turnips.

W B Yates has rented his blacksmith shop, and J M Kitchen one of his dwellings to a Mr Hollinbeck, of Iowa, and we trust he will like this place well enough to buy, as we may have a smith permanently located in our little village.

The Smithfield boys have invited the members of the Irving Sporting Club to take part in their contests. We will, says the boys. A goodly number of us will be at your place May 31st at 1 o'clock sharp, and don't you forget it.

Our Club met last Saturday and had a good time and the pleasure of initiating three new members, which gives us a membership of sixteen, and the boys say they think of shooting for the prize at Eugene on the 4th of July.

The junior member of the firm of A B & Son we learn has gone into the strawberry business, and will undoubtedly succeed, for close application is the road to success and there is plenty of that in a person when he gets up in the early hours of morning and starts for his path of duty (strawberry gathering), and does not leave the same until the late hours of evening. He says there are plenty of strawberries on Fern Ridge, but we did not know they grew tall enough to be picked on horseback. However, we wish you success Lincoln.
