ENGLISH GIRLS ABROAD.

They Manage to Have Plenty of Interests Apart from Society.

[London Paper.] American girls are much more popular abroad than ours, and for an obvious reason. They are more continental in their tastes. Ther live for society, dress, flirtation. Our young women, like their fathers and brothers, are profoundly indifferent to continental opinion. When Swedenborg visited heaven he found that the English there kept Practical Gunsmith very much to themselves. So do our countrymen abroad. They have plenty of interests apart from society. They botanize, they walk, they play lawn-tennis as if they meant winning sets, not hearts. They carry hammers, they explore fossils, they dig up bits of primitive man, they collect sea beasts, they even study the peasants and their pa-They regard foreign young men as beings of another species, no more these reasons they do not dress to please foreign young men.

Occasionally they introduce esthetic dresses to a foreign population which never heard of Mr. Wilde. It is amusing to observe the horror-stricken curiosity of a foreign town when the first peacock-blue pair of puffed sleeves these signs of the cold and insular in-difference of the British fair make her unpopular on the continent. She is not thinking about love, and sentiment, and fine feelings. She is taking her pleasure manfully, after the manner of her race.

No Room in the Abbey. [London Times.]

It sounds like a landmark in history when we are told that there is no more room for interments in Westminster Abbey. Matters must have come to this pass when the dean has had to member of that inventive class which the Roman poet admitted into the Pagan Elysium. It is said of the last two interments, those of Darwin and Spottiswoode, that the coffins were only a very few feet below the surface. For a long time there have been ghastly stories of the disturbance necessary to the finding of room for a new arrival. This has been the case, indeed, for a century and a half or more. Chaucer's grave was molested to make way for Dryden's; Ben Jonson's bones fell out one by one into the grave prepared for Sir Robert Wilson, and came in sight again when a grave was dug for John Hunter. Addison lies upon the duchess of Albemarle, and upon him James Craggs.

She Got Ahead of Butler.

[Buffalo Express.] Washington claims the honor of producing the only individual who ever got very far ahead of Gen. Butler. It was a woman, of course. She was imprisoned by him during the war, and suffered many hardships and indignities. One day he sent for her to come to his private office to interrogate her himself. As she entered he was busy writing, which he continued to do without speak ing to her or noticing that she was standing. She looked around for a seat, found one, and also a tray with a luxurious luncheon for the general himself. Having nothing else to do, she quietly ate the luncheon up, and what she could not get away with otherwise she stuffed in her pockets. After a while Gen. Butler wheeled around and said brusquely; "As you see, I have been deeply engaged." "And so have I," sweetly responded the lady, pointing to the empty tray, where not a bone remained. History does not record the general's reply to the unterrified woman.

The Suene Butter Trade.

[Philadelphia Record.] Suene, which has thus become so great a part of the butter trade, is manufactured from the very finest creamery butter-the finest that can be purchased at the great butter markets of Elgin, Ill .- mixed with lard. The adulteration is usually the finest leaf lard, which deodorized. Then amalgamation of the creamery butter is made, and so completely is the flavor and appearance of the creamery product retained in the counterfeit butter that people who have principal suene manfacturing centres are Chicago and Detroit. One factory in the former city turns out 80,000 pounds a day.

THE TWO SHINING EYES.

Vermont Yankee's Story of the Panther in the Sugar Bush.

[Chicago Herald "Train Talk." Three or four passengers struck up a conversation in a smoking-car on the Baltimore & Ohio, and, of course, each man had to tell a story. They were re-lating how badly they had ever been scared, when an old Vermont Yankee, with an elongated jaw and accent, took his turn.

"Neow, I'm goin' to tell ye a true story, and so ye needn't ask me if I manufactured it out o' the hull cloth. It was up in old Vairmont, bout seven years ago. I was a-keepin a sugar bush them days, cout tout four mile from Rut'and. One night the boys left me cout in the camp all alone to mind the kittles. ## Horror of Hauging.

[Boston Herald.] It is admitted that there are many other forms by which the death penalty could be imposed which would be swifter and quite as sure; such, for example, as shooting, guillotining or administering a powerful shock of electricity. But the advocates of hanging maintain that none of these would have the same impression upon the public mind that the old traditional form of punishment now produces.

Obviously, this is a criticism the soundness of which it is impossible to attirm or deny. We have learned to associate hanging with a special horror in consequence of long association; vation Army. but, after a long practice, we might consider the process of killing a man by a powerful current of electricity a peculia ly terrible method, and one well chimited to appal a would-be criminal. We are wedded to our present custom in consequence of the long period during which we have continued it, and it cannot from this be certainly by an interesting process is completely argued that it is as wise or expeditious a method as might be devised.

BARLEY—Although there is no very general or pronounced demand, the feelis a shade stronger than at the close of last week. Offerings are comparatively free, but there is no pressure to sell, while holders are quite firm in asking rates. Some fairly good feed, rather light, sold by sample at 82½c, but for anything choice 85c $\psi$ ctl was the ruling figure. For a parcel of good No. 2 quality, an offer offer of 77½c $\psi$ ctl was refused. In brewing the movement is moderately steady, and fair transactions are daily occurring within a range of 90@37½c $\psi$ ctl, according to qual-
