HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty.

It has had many imitators, but none have to fully meet all the requirements needed for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp.
HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfillment of its promise.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and drysness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE FOR THE WHISKERS

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.
A SKETCH OF THE POLITICAL CAREER OF THE DEMO-CRATIC CANDIDATE FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.

Thomas A. Hendricks was born a Buckeye, his native place being a small village in Muskingum county, not far from Zanesville, Ohio. In 1822, when he was three years old, his father moved to Shelby county, Ind., and that State has since been his home. His father had sufficient property to educate his children, and at the age of 22 young Hendricks graduated at Hanover College. He went immediately to Chambersburg, Pa., where he studied law, and two years later was admitted to the bar. He then returned to Indiana and in the village of Shelbyville hung out his shingle. Old acquaintances say he made a quick success, both by his knowledge of the law and his attractive personal characteristics. It is said that the late Governor Morton, when opposing young Hendricks, could usually win before a jury, but in an argument before a Judge Hendricks would beat him every time.

In 1848 Hendricks was elected a member of the State Legislature, and two years later helped to form a Constitution for his State. The next five years he served his district in Congress.
Then one morning, while sitting on the portico of his home in Shelbyville, a friend handed him a franked envelope postmarked "Washington." It was from Franklin Pierce, asking him to come on to Washington and take the office of Land Commissioner. He accepted, and for nearly four years discharged the duties of that post. He remained in office one year longer than he intended to because of a controversy with Land Officer Burch of Missouri.
Burch's son had taken up a very large tract of the best land in Missouri, and Burch wanted to get a patent for the young man, contrary to law and right.
Hendricks cut off the grab and stayed in office long enough to see that it should not again be attempted. While Commissioner he heard and decided 22,000 of untested land claims.

His standing before the people of his State made him the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1860. This was not a good year for Democratic candidates, and Henry S. Lane defeated him. Lane went to the Senate at once and Morton succeeded to the Governor's chair. Two years later the Democrats turned the State Legislature and Senate inside out, and the new Houses at once elected Hendricks United States Senator for the term expiring in 1869. This was the opportunity which Hendricks needed to give him a national reputation. Democrats could do little more than protest in those days, but Hendricks protested against the Republican reconstruction methods so effectually that he was the most conspicuous before the National Democratic Convention held in New York City in 1868. New York's delegates and all the Northwest backed him, but Ohio kicked over the traces, voted persistently for Seymour, and finally with the aid of the gallery gods, created a stampede.

In 1876 Mr. Hendricks was nominated for the Vice-Presidency and elected on the ticket that has since become famous.

Mr. Hendricks' selection for the second place on the ticket by the Chicago Convention was so unanimous, it may be conjectured that his nomination will be as popularly received by his party at large.

Running over the files of the Oregonian for a part of April, we find that on the 21st of that month it said editorially: Since the Republican party can nominate a man who would be unsatisfactory on his record, why take Blaine, whose name would be the signal for a defensive campaign? Every Democratic paper in the land would publish his "record" within forty-eight hours after his nomination. Again, since the Republican party can nominate a man who would receive the united "independent," "stalwart" and "half-breed" vote, particularly in the Empire State, where such solid vote is most needed, why nominate Blaine, who could not get it!

New York Evening Post (Rep.): As for Cleveland, the Blaine people have a very small opinion of him. He is a new man, a mere accident, a very good ex-Mayor, a Governor who has signed some bills and vetoed others, but really a man without any public record as a statesman. It may be that this is going to be a campaign in which too much record will be a disadvantage. Nobody will deny that the Republican candidate has more record than almost any other man in public life, but there are portions of it which his most devoted supporters never mention. Even Steve Elkins, as far as we are aware, has never made any allusion to the Mulligan letters, or has given the country the benefit of his interpretation of the sentence. "I do not feel that I shall prove a dead-head in the enterprise if I once embark in it. I see various channels in which I know I can be useful."

Gardiner (Mass.) News (Ind. Rep.): If Mr. Crapo will take a run up this way he will find evidences of not only discontent but open rebellion that will send him home a much less sanguine Blaine man. The Western Massachusetts woods are just crammed full of bolters.

Patterson (N. J.) Republican: If a tax of $2 on a blanket makes a man moderately prosperous, why would not a tax of $6 make him a "blessed bond-holder?"

Blaine's War Record.

Here is the war record of the man who intimates that he would delight to wade in gore, whose friends insinuate that he would reach the utmost height of felicity could he but give the tail of the British lion a hearty twist, drive the imperial eagles of Germany squawking back into the Alps and raise a rumpus all around:

1. Blaine was the first man drafted for the war in his district.
2. He hired one Bradford as a substitute for $200.
3. Bradford never went to the front, but was imprisoned during the war for a criminal offense.
The Common Council of Augusta repaid to Blaine the $250 he had given to Bradford as a substitute.
