AYER'S Hair Vigor

restored, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. It restores the hair, and cures itching, scurf, dandruff, thickened, and brittle hair, though not always cured. It checks falling out of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scalp disease, and the scalp is made healthy and free from itching. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vigor is unequalled. It contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

THE LATE JOHN HILL.

DEATH OF THE "FATHER OF CHEAP POSTAGE." ATBOONTON, N. J., JULY 21, 1884.

Ex-Congressman John Hill, who will be remembered as the father of the Cheap Postage bill, died at his home in Boonton, Morris county, N. J., July 21st, at the age of 61. He was born in Catskill county, N. Y., in 1821, and in about 1844 he settled in Boonton, and was elected from there to the State Assembly in 1861-62, and again in 1866. During the latter term he served as Speaker of the House. He was elected to the Fortieth, Forty-first and Forty-second Congress, his last term ending 1883. He was frequently mentioned in connection with the gubernatorial nomination in New Jersey, and was considered the foremost Republican in the State. Mr. Hill was interested in postal reform and the question of reducing postage for many years, and about sixteen years ago, when he first entered Congress, he introduced a bill to abolish the franking privilege, and after two years or more of hard work it was accomplished. About the same time he introduced the one-cent postal card bill, and after two years or more it was passed, against much opposition. In his remarks on those bills at the time, in April, 1872, he advocated a reduction in letter postage, considering the abolition of the franking privilege and adopting the one-cent postal card the stepping stone to reduction in letter postage. After the organization of the House in December, 1881, he introduced his two-cent postage bill, which was referred to the Post Office and Post Road Committee who delayed reporting it to the House (the first session). He called the attention of the House to the bill, made several speeches on the subject, and made every effort to get it before the House for consideration. In November, 1882, he went to Washington to see Postmaster General Howe and brought the matter before him. He also called on the President in regard to the matter, and found him favorable toward the measure, and in his message to Congress a few weeks later, he recommended the reduction of letter postage. Shortly after the meeting of Congress in December Mr. Hill saw the Chairman of the sub-committee of the Appropriation Committee on the Post Office Appropriation bill. On Wednesday morning, after the third day, the latter offered a resolution asking permission of the House to place the two-cent postage stamp measure in the Post Office Appropriation bill, which was granted, and on the next day the Post Office Appropriation bill was reported from the Committee to the House, printed and brought before the House for consideration. A great many amendments to it were offered, but after a long and tedious fight over this clause, it passed, and finally the whole bill passed, and after a long and bitter opposition in the Senate, passed that body on Friday, the day after the report of the Post Office Appropriation bill to the House containing the two-cent postage clause. Mr. Hill received many letters thanking him for his interest in the matter, and also from associations and public bodies with resolutions of thanks.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep): Steve Elkins will reign supreme over the work of the National Republican Committee rooms in New York. A branch office is to be opened in Chicago. Why not send for Dorsey to take charge of it.

The Rail and Man Know Blaine.

Portland Oregonian, June 2, 1884.

The railroad men and other capitalists like those we referred to are intensely shrewd and astute men. They have superior means of intelligence and are careful not to make mistakes. They know Mr. Blaine. Mr. Huntington, as his famous letter shows, has spent much time in Washington as a lobbyist, and he knows whether Mr. Blaine is a good man for him or not, and Mr. Spreckles also knows him. These men have no interest in common with those of the common people. They select a President on precisely the same principles that they appoint agents in their business, and the fact that they have selected Mr. Blaine shows that they have confidence that he will promote their interests. They would not support him if he were not "a railroad man and in league with the corporations."

The Knownothing Spirit.

We clip the following from the editorial columns of a Republican paper of this State. The extract shows the narrow, intolerant bigotry of the Republican party, and well worthy a supporter of the former Knownothing editor:

"I was not so much of a Blaine man at first," said a gentleman as he stood looking at Harper's Weekly and Puck, which were nailed to the show-board of a news stand, "but these papers have converted me. Here are two foreigners, Nast and Keppler, employed to belittle a man who is the choice of at least 5,000,000 American voters. They are mere artistic Hessians after all.—Boston Journal."

"Dr." Blaine Peels Warm.

No wonder "Dr." Blaine rushed to the seaside. He felt a political hot wave coming toward Augusta. Some of the "Doctor's" old friends are painting his record. In this he figures as a prohibitionist and a know nothing. He fomented religious persecution. Tried to create a war between Irish and Germans. Endeavored to repeal naturalization laws. As an editor he reviled Catholicism and insulted every Irishman within the State of Maine. Nice man this to ask for Irish and German support! No, "Doctor," you may have another sunstroke, but you cannot fool either Celt or Teuton.—New York Herald.

That brilliant soldier and able statesman, John A. Logan, was distinguished under the sobriquet of "Dirty Work Jack Logan," by Republicans before 1860. In 1859 Logan spoke of John Brown as a "traitor, thief and scoundrel," and confessed his love of slave hunting. In 1861 the honest patriot raised a company for the Confederate Army, which fought through the war on that side. Logan received $50,000 and a brigadier's commission, to throw his influence to the Union side. A pretty good record for the companion of the "tattooed" man.

Chicago Times (Ind.): A paragraph of twenty lines in Mr. Blaine's brief speech to the committee that stripped him with the announcement of his nomination to the Presidency contained the personal pronoun in the form of "I" and "we" twenty times. The wonder is how the Jingo candidate managed to put himself at the front so many times in a space so small. The only explanation that appears is that the speech was carefully written for the occasion.

Brooklyn Union (Rep.): The movement of the "young scratchers" in 1879 was hastily organized and not heartily supported in the press, but these figures prove that it controlled 20,000 votes. Political independence in New York State has grown steadily and rapidly since 1879, and 20,000 voters represent probably but a tithe of the Republicans who, in 1884, will cast their ballots, not as a party convention has dictated, but as their consciences require.

New Haven Palladium (Rep): "Subscribe for the New Haven Palladium—only paper in New Haven supporting Blaine and Logan. All the news for little money."

It's rather a queer coincidence that Ohio has seventeen German Republican papers, and that seventeen German Republican papers in Ohio have loathed Blaine.
