Central Market,

"Tippecanoe and Tyler Too." (Ben: Perley Poore.)
Gen. Harrison, when he was nominated by the Whigs at Harrisburg in 1840, as their candidate for president, was a tall, thin, careworn old gentleman, who had rotated from one office into another, and who was then clerk of the Hamilton county (Ohio) court. His office was in Cincinnati, but he resided on his farm at North Bend, a few miles lower down on the Ohio river, in a two-story house, a part of which was the original log cabin of pioneer days. This made Baillie Payton, of Tennessee, who carried to the general the news of his nomination, say in a speech the next night at Cincinnati, that the Whig candidate lived in a log cabin, with a latch-string never pulled in, a barrel of hard cider to treat his friends and coon skins nailed over the cracks in the wall to keep the wind away. This led to the erection of log cabins all over the country by the Whigs, with speeches and songs. Some of the "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" glees, sung by trained voices, with large audiences to join in the chorus, were wonderfully effective. Clubs were formed, uniformed in homespun with gilt buttons bearing a log cabin, and a vast majority of the people became infected with Whig principles, singing occasionally: "Van, Van, is a used-up man."

THE ORIGINAL JUDGE LYNCH.

How Justice was Once Meted Out to Virginia Horse Thieves.
Lynchburg (Va.) Letter.—While chatting with an old antiquarian in his cool library this afternoon I casually inquired how this town came by its peculiarly suggestive name. "Did the original judge of dreadful fame ever live here?" I asked.
"Yes, he did," replied the old Virginia gentleman, with brightening eyes that revealed delight in the topic. "Judge Lynch might fairly be called the founder of the city, and it makes me angry to see all these newspaper stories, not only locating him in other states, but condemning his mode of procedure as infamous and brutal.
"Not long before the revolutionary war, and at that time there were quite a number of that splendid race, the Scotch-Irish, settled here. Shrewd and brave, cautious, yet daring, dashing, but prudent, honest and energetic. The Lynches were of the same stalwart stock. They settled in Prince William county. There were four boys in the family, and one of them, John Lynch was a bright, quick young fellow, and remarkably courageous. One day in rambling about the head of the James river he found a gap in the mountains on either side of the water which it struck him would make a capital crossing point for travelers, and forthwith he drove his proprietary stake, and shortly after, with a few logs and an old saw, established a primitive ferry. The horse thieves were among the first to take advantage of the new convenience, and young Lynch, himself scrupulously honest, was disgusted and humiliated at having to take them across. At this time the country was sparsely settled, courts were few, and jails far apart. The evil continued to increase; finally the ferry became the favorite means of escape for the stock stealers, and John Lynch, thoroughly aroused, proposed to put an end to it.
"What could he do single handed?"
"Well, I will tell you what he actually did. He applied to the governor of Virginia for a commission to act as a justice of the peace. His reputation for honesty and good judgment was beyond a doubt, and his commission was granted. He was qualified, and became a judge. The first use he made of his power was to appoint some special constables and engage a few sharp detectives. They at once began work, with such success that gang after gang were captured.
"Did they have no trial?"
"Yes. They were brought before Judge Lynch, and he never acted until he was positive of their guilt, and his knowledge of the men and the country was an immense advantage to him.
"If he found them guilty he would, according to law, require a good bond, which, of course, in those days, a thief could never get, and when that form was complied with, would start them off well guarded to some far-away jail. The constables knew what the order to march meant, and as soon as they found themselves in a thick wood, chose a stout tree, and, with a good rope, which they carried, created a temporary scaffold from which the horse thieves quickly dangled. Hanging was the legal punishment for horse stealing in those days, but the promptness and dispatch with which Judge Lynch meted out justice at the very door terrorized the evil-doers of the country and between those he hung and those fled, in two years there was not a horse thief in Virginia.
"And what became of Judge Lynch?"
"He continued to live near the ferry, round which a large village grew up under the name of Lynch's ferry, and not until long after his death did it become Lynchburg. During his life Lynch law was honored and upheld, but since then it has altogether lost its original character and meaning. Now, as I understand it, it is merely the infuriated impulse of a rough mob, who, without waiting for the law at hand to prove innocence or guilt, decide on it according to their own inclination and take a life perhaps more unblemished than their own. "John Lynch, did his state a service in ridding it of a lot of miscreants, who, but for him, were out of the reach of the law, but were he living no one would be quicker than he to resent this barbarous mob fashion of putting a man to sudden death, when the law, the courts, the prison and scaffold are close at hand to mete out justice and punishment."

PORTLAND MARKET REPORT.

FLOUR—Fancy extra, # bbl, $4.25; superfine, $3.50; country brands, $3.75.
WHEAT—Advices are generally of a steady character, and present nothing of new interest. The local market is attracting more attention, and it is claimed that over $1.02 had been paid for Walla Walla during the week. Inquiry brought out strong denials, and shippers named $1.02 as top paying price. Sales were made at this from brokers to shippers, and if more was paid the parcel must have been in a favorite position.
We quote: Good to choice, # 100 lb., $1.10 @ 1.05; good valley, # 112; Walla Walla, # 1.02.
BEANS—Small white, $3.25 @ 3.50; bayos, $3.25 @ 3.50; pinks, $4.00, and butters, $4.50.
LARD—Steady with free stocks. We quote: Oregon, kegs, # lb., 11 1/2 @ 12; tins, 12 1/2; Eastern, small tins, 12 1/2 @ 13.
RICE—Sandwich Islands, No. 1, # lb., 5 1/2; China mixed, # lb., 5; China No. 1, none; Rangoon, 5 1/2.

WHEAT—The market is under good headway. Shippers seem to be getting supplies about as fast as they are wanted, and loading is going on without any serious delay. Prices have improved somewhat during the week, owing to the slight change for the better at foreign centers. Still there is no specially buoyant tone to the situation. Good shipping grades are changing hands on a basis of $1.22, and some choice parcels occasionally bring $1.25, while for an extra prime offering millers sometimes pays as high as $1.27 # cwt. The closing prices last week were as follows:
No. 1 White— Bid. Asked.
Buyer season, $1.38 1.39
Buyer season, city, 1.38 1.40
Buyer 1884, 1.30 1.30
Seller 1884, 1.24 1.24
Buyer 1884, city, 1.24 1.30
Seller 1884, city, 1.20 1.25
CRACKED CORN—Quotable at $31 @ 35 # ton.
BARLEY—The market was a little tame last week, and buyers did not respond with the promptness desired by sellers. Prices were hardly as strong, though there was no disposition to make concessions in order to increase the volume of business. Good to choice feed is quotable at 85c to 87c # cwt, the latter being an extreme figure at the moment. Old and new brewing will be on a level as regards price very soon. Even now it is not easy to find an offering of choice new much below $1 # cwt, while $1.05 is about the top for old.
Closing prices were:
No. 1 Feed— Bid. Asked.
Buyer season, $1.81 1.84
Buyer season, 1.81 1.84
Seller 1884, 1.83 1.84
HAY—Alfalfa, $8.00 @ 11.00; wheat, $12.00 @ 15.00; oat, $11.00 @ 15.00; barley, $8.00 @ 11.00; mixed, $7.00 @ 10.00 # ton.
