A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS. FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 24, 1882. 'Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the enclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case. Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect - being now able to do a good day's work. Although 75 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have done tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully, HIRSH PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

PREPARED BY Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles for $5.

Which James G. Blaine?

(Boston Globe.)

There are two James G. Blaines in this country; both live in Maine; both have been Speakers of the House; both have represented their State in the Senate. Beyond that the parallel ceases, except that both have been prolific letter writers, and it is these very letters that show the diametrically opposite dispositions of the two men. One is a Know-Nothing, a stock jobber and a monopolist; the other a philanthropist. Read their real characters in their writings, as thus:

Know-Nothing Blaine's Editorial 1855: "We hope and sincerely believe the day is not far distant * * * when the honorable pride of being an American citizen will suffer no blush from having our paternal rights bestowed in full equality upon those who are not of the household. * * * The good judgment of that Know-Nothing Legislature was exhibited in the passage of an Act annulling the naturalization powers of the courts of this State."

Philanthropist Blaine's Letter of October 4th, 1884: "It is utterly untrue that I ever advocated a residence of twenty-one years as a requirement of naturalization. On the contrary, I have always opposed the party that suggested it."

Then, in the matter of frankness, here is the same radical difference. Listen to a few from each:

Monopolist Blaine: Regard this letter as strictly confidential. Do not show it to any one. * * * BURN THIS LETTER.

Philanthropist Blaine: I am not afraid to show the letters. Thank God Almighty, I am not ashamed to show them.

In matters of personal honor, one Mr Blaine appears to be the soul of chivalry, the other the abettor of scandals:

The Chivalrous Mr. Blaine: I am sure that honorable Democrats, alike with honorable Republicans, will justify me in defending the honor of my family, if need be, with my life.

The Abettor of Scandals Blaine: I (private secretary) am directed by Mr Blaine to thank you (for the forged Guenther scandal against Governor Cleveland), which he has read with interest, and confidentially referred to the Republican National Committee.

One of the two Blaine's always does everything fairly and above-board; the other is very sly and secretive.

The Sly Mr. Blaine: No one will ever know from me that I have disposed of a single dollar in Maine.

The Frank Mr. Blaine: Whenever concealment is desirable, avoidance is advisable.

The Mr. Blaine of the philanthropic turn of mind always avoids monopolists; the other as invariably courts them.

Anti-Monopolist Blaine: I never had any transaction of any kind with Thomas A. Scott.

Monopolist Blaine: I can do something, I feel very sanguine, with Thomas A. Scott.

One Mr Blaine has always been poor but honest, having steadfastly refused even to have anything to do with coal and iron lands in Ohio, least he should seem even remotely to be opposed to the dearly beloved miners, whose goodwill and friendship were more to him than any amount of gold or other goods of this transitory world. The other Mr. Blaine bought liberally of the stock of one of the most grinding monopolies in Ohio.

From Mr. Blaine, the Miners' Advocate:

BELLAIRE, Ohio, October 4, 1884.

My Dear Sir: I do not own, and never did own, an acre of coal land or any other kind of land in the Hocking valley or any other part of Ohio. My letter to Hon. Hezekiah Bundy in July last on this same subject was accurately true. Very truly yours, JAMES G. BLAINE

From Mr. Blaine, Mining Stock jobber:

SENATE CHAMBER, WASHINGTON, December 30, 1880.

My Dear Sir: Find inclosed my draft for $25,000 in payment of my subscription to the Hope Furnace enterprise. Touching the interest, I have to ask that, whatever it may amount to, you will permit its payment to be postponed until some matters between Mr. Lee and myself are definitely adjusted. Very respectfully, JAMES G. BLAINE

And so it goes on through an almost endless chapter. But this vast difference between the two men would be of no interest to the public except that a careless, indiscriminating people often fail, from the similarity of names, to distinguish between them. Hence it is that the philanthropist who is now running as a candidate for President is unjustly injured by the letters written by the rascally monopolist. Thus are the innocent even obliged to suffer for the misdeeds of the guilty.

The Man of Contraries.

Every defence of Mr. Blaine involved the tactics of the cuttle fish. His apologies are forced to muddle the truth. Nothing in his career seems capable of bearing the light. If by chance one of his defenders makes an honest statement, it is immediately discovered that it is inconsistent with something the Plumed Knight has said or done. Everything, therefore, goes by contraries. Blaine said he never owned a share of stock in any coal, iron or land company in the State of Ohio. It was immediately proven that he subscribed for a share of the Hope Furnace Tract Association and paid $25,000 for it. His denial and the truth of the statement were published side by side. The lie was forced to face the truth, and the whole country turned away from the humiliating spectacle in disgust. So that ended the controversy and the country settled down to the conviction that Mr. Blaine was guilty of another lie. It is useless to recur to the Muligan business. We begin to think that it is impossible for the Republican candidate to tell the truth. He does not know what it means.

The Blaine Circus.

The managers of Mr. Blaine's circus in Ohio were accustomed to address the crowds which came to see him as follows: "This, ladies and gentlemen, is the Blaine. He was captured in the wild and gloomy forests of Maine, and is the only specimen of his kind now travelling. In his calmer moments he is as gentle as a lamb, but when aroused his voice may be heard for miles around. He has been exhibited before the Congress of the United States, and his peculiarities are the theme of the press and public alike. Though he has once been sunstruck, and been run over by the relentless locomotive of public opinion, he is yet in the prime and vigor of life. On leaving the solitudes of Maine for the West he changed his skin, and can only be recognized by the most expert showman; and he has been known to turn himself inside out to please the people who patronize this show. As the train moves on the crowd may look upon this great North American wonder free of charge, and the hand will strike up an evening air."

The mere commission of a great wrong may not in any great degree affect the general tone of morality.

When it is justly censured by the people, its evil influence is greatly circumscribed. The case is, however, entirely different when every effort is put forth by a large number of people to palliate and deny an offence which every unbiased mind must condemn. Such action must inevitably have a tendency to lower the standard of public morality. When a man's own letters undeniably prove that he prostituted official position to secure private gain, it can not be conducive to sound morality to insist that such conduct is consistent with scrupulous integrity and honor.

"I have endeavored, in writing to you, not to be indelicate or abusive," remarked Mr. Blaine to "My Dear Mr. Fisher." Evidently the Republican candidate was on his Ps and Qs, and would not for the world have said anything to wound his correspondent. But Mr. Fisher understood it to be: "Your money or your life!" and concluded to shell out accordingly.

The New York Tribune, Blaine's leading organ in the Union, is now in its glory. It has an Irishman whom it can abuse and blackguard without stint. Daniel McSweeney, the victim of English brutality and Blaine's neglect, affords the Tribune a fine opportunity for the display of its old-time anti-Irish vituperation.

Senator Duff proudly proclaimed at Jacksonville that he could demonstrate that a "protective tariff would make wool worth twenty cents a bushel." The learned Senator must learn "to say his little piece" better than that.
