

LATE NEWS SUMMARY.

Foreign and Domestic. Marshall Bazaine is now penniless at Madrid. A Newburgh, N. Y., boy has been fined $1 for swearing on the streets. Twenty inches of snow fell at St. Vincent, Mich., on the 6th of April. The wheat crop over a large area of West Virginia will be a failure. Three Pennsylvania railroads have just passed into the hands of receivers. The Egyptian Government has ordered the raising of an army of 50,000 men. John W. Mackey has gone to Mexico to look after his railway interests there. The Rhode Island Legislature has defeated the biennial sessions amendment. The young ladies of the Ontario Ladies' College have organized two baseball clubs. Some 55,000 miners are about to strike in England against a reduction of wages. Queen Victoria is reported as being personally very much opposed to a war with Russia. Among the exhibits at the Crazy Quilt Show in Boston is a fire-screen containing 35,000 beads. The Second Adventists of Concord, N. H., predict that the end of the world will come May 19th. Mrs. De Sota, wife of the ex-president of Honduras, has bought a house and lot in New York for $210,000. On the notification of the County Attorney, every liquor saloon in Atchison, Kansas, has ceased to sell. The Postmaster-General has introduced in the British Commons a bill fixing the rate of telegrams at six pence. Grand Army Posts in every part of the country have been sending resolutions of sympathy to Gen. Grant recently. The Governor of Victoria has issued an order forbidding the entry of foreign ships into port Phillip during the night. The Supreme Court of Iowa has unanimously decided that every provision of the Prohibitory Law is constitutional. They are trying to get up a law in Illinois compelling railroads to reduce their rates for accommodations in sleeping-cars. A disease resembling cholera has broken out at San Felipe de Jativa, Province of Valencia, Spain, and the people are panicking. Mrs. Victoria Morosini Schilling has withdrawn her suit against her father for moneys deposited in the Hanover Bank by him for her use. In Tallahassee, Fla., a few days ago, a couple were married who had only been personally acquainted for the brief period of ten minutes. A perfect skeleton, to which was attached a ball and chain, was lately unearthed twenty-five feet below the surface of the earth near Savannah. H. Quinn, a nephew of the Indian Agent, who escaped, says fourteen persons were killed and many wounded in the Frog Lake (Manitoba) massacre. It really looks as though the Cape Cod Ship-canal has made more progress within a year than in the past 200 years—2,500 feet, actually dug, leaves only about 34,000 more.

It is reported that the negroes near Enfaula, Ala., are looking for a body of Yankee soldiers who are expected to massacre all the whites who voted for Cleveland. The twelfth annual Convention of the Wyoming Stock Growers' Association met at Cheyenne last week. The attendance was large. Sixty-seven new members were admitted. While Joseph Bohman was attending to some repairs on the roof of the Gibson House at Cincinnati, he caught hold of an electric wire, and was instantly killed by the shock. Six thousand Canadian troops are stationed along the boundary line to prevent the American Indians crossing. It is said that Kiel has 3,000 men and six nine-pounder cannon. At a hat carnival held at Washington Courthouse, Ohio, recently, the head gear worn by one of the ladies was ten feet in diameter, and her gentleman friend wore one the size of a gun cap. Deseronto, Canada, is said to be lighted with gas made from sawdust, a ton of which yields 10,000 feet of gas, at a net cost, after deducting the value of by-products, of $1.60 per 1,000 feet. On Broadway, New York, between Canal and Fourteenth streets, there are seventy-five large stores vacant. Dull times and excessive rents demanded by the owners are the cause of this. Near Asheville, N. C., last week, a house was robbed of $3,000 and the family murdered. The victims were J. F. Joyce, aged 71; Margaret Joyce, aged 19; Charles Joyce, aged 2, and Mary Rice, aged 40. At the Chicago municipal election the Democratic candidate for Mayor (Harrison) defeated his opponent (Smith) by a majority of 334. The Republicans claim fraud and will contest the election. At the New Orleans Exposition, California has been awarded the sweepstakes gold medal against the world for best eleven citrus fruits, also two gold medals, eleven silver medals and thirty premiums. A bellboy in a Portland, Me., hotel, while running up stairs lately with some loose change in his mouth, stumbled and swallowed the whole amount—two twenty-five cent pieces, two dimes, and eight pennies. After a riot which arose out of religious disputes at Wintoblah, on the west coast of Africa, it was found that three natives had been killed and cut to pieces, their remains being prepared for cooking in a gigantic pie. The tide of emigration from South Carolina continues to flow westward. Almost every day bands of colored people depart for Arkansas and other Western States, influenced by the glowing accounts of the railroad immigration agents. The Bartholdi Committee has so far raised about $135,000, of which over $100,000 has been contributed by citizens of New York city. The sum of $25,000 was quietly raised within ten days. There is needed to complete the work about $135,000. The returns of the census taken in 1882 give the population of Russia in Europe as numbering 77,879,521, of whom 38,661,977 were males and 39,217,544 females, making with the Grand Duchy of Finland and other parts of the Empire, a total over 102,000,000. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has issued schedules of the supplies required by the Indians this spring, including $1,500,000 worth of beef and $750,000 worth of dry goods. Advertisements for proposals will be printed in Democratic newspapers hereafter. Reporters and detectives find about 1,500 Socialists in Pittsburgh and vicinity, of whom not one in a hundred is a real workman, or has an honest means of livelihood. They are all foreigners, and come to this country to get somebody else to support them. Among them were two incendiary women speakers. Officers John A. Culp, and Rush Meadow were in pursuit of a negro named Glass, who was wanted for a murder recently committed in Indian Territory. They overtook the fugitive who was riding on horseback, and ordered him to halt. He attempted to draw a pistol, when one of the officers fired, and Glass fell from his horse feigning death. The officers believing they had killed him laid down their weapons and approached. When within a few feet of Glass he sprang up, shot both officers and fled.

TOO MUCH DOG!

His Terrible Death from Eating the First Pound Cake Made by a Bride—An Interesting Sketch as Illustrated and Told in the Chicago Tribune. We were newly married and living at Hyde Park, and one morning as I was engaged in making my first pound-cake my husband came in hurriedly, saying: "I have lost my dog," and sank into a chair breathlessly. We valued that dog; he was not a thing of beauty, but I like to have a dog around. I like to see him sit in dreamy reverie in the sunshine and pensively snap up flies in that nonchalant way that dogs have. We waited till evening for his return, but he came not, and we advertised for him, offering three dollars reward. The next morning we were awakened by a hideous noise in the road, and going to the window I beheld a crowd of boys, each with one or two dogs, struggling and fighting among the flower-beds in the front yard. My husband's appearance was greeted with a yell from a hundred throats—"Mister, is this yer dorg?" as they liberated the animals. There was a rush and a chorus of barks and growls, and my husband went up in the garret and talked to the crowd through a ventilator-hole till he persuaded them to take their dogs away. Our dog was not among them, nor did he appear, although there was a procession of dogs past the house all the morning. About eleven o'clock we saw a dog bringing a man up the path, the man merely holding on to a chain, with his legs beating in the air and a resigned expression on his face. They stopped at the front porch and the man rang the bell. They were a well-matched pair, but the man looked the worst. My husband went to the door and the man said: "Here's yer dorg, give us do three cases." We were going to say that it wasn't our dog, but somehow we didn't; it seemed dangerous, so we gave him the money and asked him to take the dog away and drown him, but he didn't seem to hear us. He went away, leaving the dog on the porch. He told us before leaving that the dog's name was Ike. Ike was a study in anatomy as he sat there. His eyes were a bright cardinal, and his ears hung down like tent-flaps, while his short tail moved with a nervous vigor or that was full of character. He was a good deal worn, like an old hair trunk, in places, and his general complexion where the plush was worn off was a dull Roman ochre. I noticed that his eyes were cut, and he seemed wrapped in thought as I looked him over for his good points—in fact, he was full of them—and as I studied him I felt that I would soon know him well. At any rate, I concluded he would be a good dog on tramps when my husband was away, and I told Henry to bring him in the house and give the poor creature something to eat. Henry sided to the door and said: "Iky, Iky, nice doggy," and then Ike glanced at him with a yearning gaze and made a wild plunge for him. I climbed on top of the clothes-horse and Henry got behind the door, and Iky sat down in the middle of the room, and I noticed that he was one of those dogs who make up their minds in a very short time and act on the impulse of the moment. He looked calmly at me and curled up his lips, showing a row of teeth like piano keys, and ran out a tongue of red, fannel-like brilliancy, a yard long. I could see quite a distance down his throat. Finally I remembered that the proper way to approach a dog was to do it boldly, and I told Henry, and he crept to the pantry and brought out a leg of lamb and offered it to Ike. He didn't hesitate a moment, but made it disappear before I could get down from my perch. Then Henry took hold of his chain to lead him to the door, when he heard an organ-grinder in the street. Ike seemed to think he had neglected something, and made a bee-line for the yard, and Henry indulged him, it seems to me, for he went with him gay and frolicsome, mowingdown my darling plants till Ike went over the fence after the organ-grinder, leaving Henry hanging there. I helped him into the house and we barred the door and rejoiced in the dog's departure, but he came back with enough Italian rags in his mouth to start a paper mill, and attempted to eat a hole in the door. So we had to let him in, and this time he didn't seem to mind us much, but sat there chewing rags with a Henry Irving expression, till they were disposed of, then he ate two pairs of kid shoes and a length of hose, and then began to hunt us around the room. I began to feel foolish, but of course was too much on the move to have any decided views, but I knew I had unchristian feelings against that dog and wished he was the missing link of sausage. He was no slouch of a dog, though, and his chain slashed around and repoussed the stove, barked the furniture, and slit the wallpaper as if he had been engaged purposely for it, till he found Henry's umbrella and rubber coat, and then he settled down and made a good, solid meal and lay down in front of the stove right where my first pound cake lay in the open oven getting cooled off, and he looked as if he was satisfied and pleased with us. We were glad of that. We saw that Ike was not a dog to be cajoled into going outside, that was evident. He had come to stay with us, and how we loved that stranger who brought him; but we thought we would wait awhile before we tried to get into his inmost affections. We got out the second-story window on a ladder that a boy brought us, and went to mother's house. Then Henry went down to town to find a book-agent and send him to the house; but it seems that everybody had heard about the dog, and when father came home he loaded his gun with pieces of lead-pipe and went over to the house and opened the door. Then he went in and Henry followed, and I watched breathlessly to see him come flying out, but I soon heard shrieks and yells of laughter proceeding from the kitchen, and they called me over. I went in, and there lay Ike on his back, his legs in the air, stiff in death, wearing on his mobile countenance the most terrible look of agony I have ever seen. He had eaten my pound-cake. Wasn't it a shame? Mrs. Miggins.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM.

A Legislative Committee Meets a Shakerag Man—Why They Could Prove Nothing on Him. In view of the fact that a large sum of money was appropriated by the Arkansas Legislature for educational purposes, a committee was appointed to visit certain parts of the State and investigate the condition of the people. One day recently while the committee were crossing a mountain in Shakerag County, they met an old fellow who would have passed them without saying anything had not the chairman spoken to him. "My friend," asked the head committee-man, "do you live about here?" "Yes, just about." "We are the Educational Committee, appointed by the Legislature to go out and see the people concerning the great cause of education." "Ah, ha." "Do you know anything about the schools of this county?" "Wall, I know as much about the schools as they do about me." "Yes, I know, but what is the condition of the schools?" "Ain't heard no complaint." "Have you a school in the immediate vicinity?" "No, I haint." "I didn't suppose you had, but—" "Then, what made yer ax?" "At any rate, I think this county is sufficiently illiterate to claim special attention. How many children have you?" "Ain't counted 'em lately. Reckon though I've got my share." "How many have you that are large enough to go to school?" "Owin' to how far they have to go?" "Can any of them read?" "Yes, but they can't write worth a blame." "Wouldn't you like to see them in school?" "Leave 'em 'em as anywhar." "How many months during the year can you spare them?" "Can't spare 'em a tall." "Won't you let them go to school?" "Won't hinder 'em." "Is your wife an educated woman?" "Used to be but she ain't now." "How is that?" "Ain't got the same wife." "How long have you been living in this country?" "Ever since I come here." "Yes, but when did you come here—what year?" "The year aiter I come from Missouri." "What year did you come from Missouri?" "The year before I came here." "We have come up here to help you along, and we hope that you would appreciate our services, but we see that you do not. We feel that it is our duty to assist in educating the children of the land, and it grieves us to see that you are so unconcerned." "I ain't axed you for nothin'. I didn't send for you. I didn't tell nobody that I wanted you to come. Ef you've got any whisky an' turberker that yer waster slash 'roun', all right. Ef yer ain't, all right. I know your game as well as you do," moving away. "You ain't nothin' but one of these here peering grand juries, a prying into other peoples' business. Oh, I ain't afeard of you, for you couldn't prove nothin' on me less'n the Sanderson boys were here, an' they've dun left the country. You are a pretty lot o' fellers, you air." "My dear sir, you make a mistake," said the chairman. "Yes, so does a sheep. I know all about you. A lot o' blamed fellows jes' like you come up here wunst an' tuck me down before the Yankee court. Yes, I know how anxious you air to spend money on my chillun." "We are members of the Legislature." "Yes, so is a goat. I know all about you, an' you'd better roost high, let me tell you, for if the Applins find out that you air here they'll tell you how many schools they want. Good day, gentlemen. You ain't sharp enough to take us all in, I reckon."—Arkansas Traveler.

Breathing Illuminating Gas.

The injurious effect produced by illuminating gas is due, according to Grubing's researches, not to the continuance of its action, but to its concentration, or the percentage of it in the air. It is asserted that air containing five parts in ten thousand can be breathed by men and animals for hours, and even days, without any injury to the health; from seven to eight parts in ten thousand cause indigestion; twenty parts cause difficult breathing, loss of power and uncertainty of motion; with twenty to forty parts drowsiness begins, and, when there is still more carbonic oxide in the air, the poisoning is attended with violent symptoms; brain and spinal column are especially affected, cramps seize the victim, yet he may recover if brought quickly into fresh air. Breathing air heavily charged with carbonic oxide for a long time may likewise cause death.—Scientific Journal.

"The motive," says the Scow's Journal, "that leads teachers and pupils to work for the rewards of an examination is about as low an ideal of civilized education as can be found." And its effect upon the young mind is bad. Many a man has recalled with profound regret the ruses he adopted, while at school, to increase his percentage. It is very often the case that the student fears to risk original investigation lest he place his chance of securing a prize in jeopardy.—Current. "Ella, my child," said a prudish old maid to a pretty niece, "if the Lord had intended your hair to curl He would have done it Himself." "So He did, Auntie, when I was a baby, but he thinks I am big enough now to do it myself."—Golden Days.

Breathing Illuminating Gas.

The injurious effect produced by illuminating gas is due, according to Grubing's researches, not to the continuance of its action, but to its concentration, or the percentage of it in the air. It is asserted that air containing five parts in ten thousand can be breathed by men and animals for hours, and even days, without any injury to the health; from seven to eight parts in ten thousand cause indigestion; twenty parts cause difficult breathing, loss of power and uncertainty of motion; with twenty to forty parts drowsiness begins, and, when there is still more carbonic oxide in the air, the poisoning is attended with violent symptoms; brain and spinal column are especially affected, cramps seize the victim, yet he may recover if brought quickly into fresh air. Breathing air heavily charged with carbonic oxide for a long time may likewise cause death.—Scientific Journal.
