

There was no city in Europe with a million inhabitants at the beginning of the present century, the most populous being London, with 835,000 persons. There are now five European cities with upward of a million inhabitants, and the first two of which contain in the aggregate 7,000,000 persons. In America, at the beginning of the century, there were no cities that would now be regarded as more than a fourth-class town; the population of New York was about 60,000.

Mr. James D. Cooke, late Postmaster at Unionville, Connecticut, is the latest Republican victim of prosecution. He has not only been turned out of office but has been turned into jail for eighteen months and subjected to a fine of $2000 for embezzling the funds of the money order department of his office. The Republican officials are turning out racials fast enough, if the Democratic Administration is a little slow.
