Settling Scrape at Corvallis.

Last Friday evening a most horrible affray took place in Corvallis. Nick Baeson, Sid Moore and Johnny Messenger were drinking, and probably gambling, in a saloon conducted by Joe McTimmons, formerly of Salem. The game became so interesting that it assumed the shape of a drunken brawl, which was very obnoxious to the proprietor. After ordering them out and giving them other notice, he commenced firing with a self-cocking revolver, 38 caliber, so rapidly that although they tried to start out after the first shot, they got but a few steps toward the door before he emptied four of the chambers. Probably the first and most dangerous shot was at Nick Baeson, formerly of Salem, but later a butcher at Corvallis. The ball entered the abdomen and lodged against the vertebra, and has since been extracted. Hopes are entertained that it followed the ribs around and did not enter the cavity, in which case favorable anticipations are entertained for the wounded man. The next two shots were at Messenger; one bullet passed through his face, the other grazed the top of his head. The fourth ball missed the mark, but passed through the wall and struck Joe Henkle, who was walking along the street. Fortunately, however, the force of the ball was so nearly spent that it did not take effect. By this time the three men got out, and McTimmons locked himself in the saloon. Baeson, declaring he was shot, was aided before he fell, into a doctor's office near by for examination, and was delirious most all night. Messenger's condition is not considered critical.

Deputy Sheriff John Lewis immediately came up and arrested McTimmons, who waived examination until yesterday, under bonds of $2,000. Yesterday Justice Quivey, considering Baeson's condition more dangerous, relinquished the bail and caused the prisoner to be committed to jail to await his preliminary trial, which will take place to-morrow.
McTimmons once conducted a saloon in Stewart's brick, in this city, and got into a shooting scrape here so many years ago. Messenger is a blacksmith.—Statesman, June 21st.

Colonel Nesmith Dead.

Ex-Senator J. W. Nesmith died at his home near Derry, in Polk county, on Wednesday, June 17, at 11:45 A. M., aged 65 years. He had been unconscious since Sunday and his death was not unexpected by his family.

J. W. Nesmith was born in Washington county, Maine, July 23, 1820. He removed to New Hampshire in 1838, thence to Ohio, thence to Missouri, and in 1843 to this State, coming with the Applegate party. He was elected a Supreme Judge of the Territory in 1847. He took a valiant part in the Cayuse war of 1848 and was Captain of Company G, Oregon volunteers. In 1848 he was elected a Representative to the State Legislature from Polk county. Shortly afterward Captain Nesmith, as he was then called, led an exploring band through the dangerous Indian country of Southern Oregon seeking for a practicable route to California. He ran for delegate to Congress in 1849, and was defeated by Samuel R. Thurston, and in 1852 was elected Treasurer of Polk county. In 1853 he was appointed Marshal for Oregon, in which capacity he served until 1855. In the Yakima war of 1855 he served the country in connection with General Phil Sheridan, who had command of a small force of United States regulars. In 1861-67 he was United States Senator from Oregon, his colleague being Colonel Baker, who was killed at the battle of Bull's Bluff. His residence has been at Derry for many years, where he farmed on a large scale, and kept house in the old style of hospitality and welcome.

Senator Nesmith was noted for his keen wit and humor, and some of his humorous sayings had a national reputation. He was a typical pioneer, and one of the foremost figures of the early settlers of this State, who are rapidly passing away. It is to be regretted that the latter part of the life of this brilliant man was clouded by a diseased mind.

Apples in the Far North.

The State Agricultural College of Iowa is doing a solid favor to the great Northwest. Professor Budd, of the faculty, has for some years been experimenting on hardy fruits. He imported many varieties of fruit trees and bushes from Northern Europe and grafted them on native stocks. More than 180 fruit trees from the frozen regions of Russia, Sweden and Norway are now in process of trial at the college farm. The young trees are planted in the open prairie without windbreak or other protection. They are now two years old, and have stood the last terrible winter admirably. Success has been reached in apples, pears and plums. The professor has strong hopes, too, that he can find peaches that will stand the trying Northwest climate, though that is, to say the least, doubtful.

The experiment is of interest from the Rocky mountains to Maine. The prospect is that in a few years more the whole splendid Northwest will be stocked with fine young orchards that will not winter kill. So much the better. Those who eat largely of fruit have little need of drugs. People who live on apples do not have dyspepsia.

A Man of Honor.

Colonel Griggelson, by the unhesitating manner by which he has purchased goods on credit, and by the hesitating manner in which he has paid for them, fails to occupy a place among the fortunate class of men known as "good customers."

The other day, just after the colonel had ordered several articles to be sent up to his house, the merchant of whom he had ordered the articles, said:

"Colonel, I would like the best in the world to favor you, but I really can't carry you any longer."

"By the way, that reminds me of a joke I heard in Washington last—"

"Never mind about Washington. I can't afford to let you have the goods. You owe me a hundred and fifty dollars already."

"My dear friend," said the colonel, lighting a cigar, "do you suppose I can, in justice to my honor, afford to pay a man who refuses to trust me? I may be peculiar, but I can't help it. My father was very much the same way. Don't remember the old gentleman, do you? You would have liked him. Wish you would send these things up as soon as you can. Good morning!"
—Arkansas Traveler.

Resolutions from the Patrons.

The following resolutions were read and adopted by Linn County Business Council at its meeting on last Saturday at Shedd:

WHEREAS, There is an effort being made on the part of some to induce His Excellency Governor Z. F. Moody to call an extra session of the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, We believe that an extra session would be of no benefit to the citizens of the State, but would only increase the expenses of the taxpayers of the State; therefore,

Resolved, That we earnestly solicit the Governor not to convene an extra session of the Legislature, but that he appoint a United States Senator to fill the vacancy, and that he make said appointment in the interest of the agricultural and working men of the State.

A conical incident in the Illinois Senatorial contest transpired at Watseka, Ill., May 20th. Major Peters, editor of the "Republican" at that place and Republican member of the Legislature from Iroquois county, when assured of Logan's election, telegraphed the boys from Springfield: "Logan is elected. Paint my old home red." He meant, of course, for them to hold a jollification at Watseka, but the boys took him at his word, and showing the message to Mrs. Peters, gained her consent, and forthwith the entire population turned out, procuring the brightest red paint imaginable, painted the house, barn and outhouses scarlet—roof, chimney and all, not sparing even the fences and tree-trunks. When the Major heard of the affair, he was the maddest man in the nation, notwithstanding Logan's election.
