

An Animated Dialogue.

"Where do I can up?" he inquired, and was shown the lower berth next to me.

"That's my pigeon-hole, is it? All right, old son, just watch my motion while I file myself away."

At this juncture he was desired to turn over his revolver to the porter, which he declined to do in a very spirited manner.

"Old Dad," (his revolver), and me always sleep together, and we don't want no divorce," he explained.

The conductor remonstrated, but was advised not to try to "braid this mule's tail."

"This here's a sleepin' car, ain't it?" he at length inquired.

"Yes."

"Well, why in the — don't you let people sleep when they've paid and gone into your game? If you're aiming to keep people awake, and want company, just dance into the next car; there's lots of folks there that don't want to go to sleep, no how, and they'll be glad to see you."

The conductor withdrew and my friend pulled off his boots and stretched himself, with many comments in an undertone on the poverty of the surroundings.

"In about ten minutes this erratic person had his head out in the aisle.

"Say, you boy!" to the porter.

"Well, sah!"

"Come a runnin'!"

The porter drew near and was handed a pillow about as big as a pin-cushion.

"Take away that goose-hair thing," commanded the cow-boy.

"Don't you want a pillow, sah?" asked the porter.

"That ain't no pillow and I don't want it no how; I'm afraid it will get in my ear."

"After this, silence, and for a short time I slept. I roused up, however, at an exclamation on the part of my neighbor.

"Hold on there, my son, just drap them boots."

"I was only jest gwine to black 'em, boss."

"Drap 'em."

"They drapped."

"Jest gwine to pull them spars, I reckon. Now, don't monkey around my camp taking things no more. If you want anything, speak for it. If you can't speak make signs, and if you can't make signs, shake a bush. You har mo!"

"Yes, sah."

"After this, silence. The wheels and rails again sang together and the cars again kept approving time, and presently I slept without interruption.

Sound Advice.

Jim Webster was brought up before an Austin justice of the peace. It was the same old charge that used to bother him in Galveston. After the evidence was all in, the judge with a perplexed look, said:

"But I do not comprehend, Webster, how it was possible for you to steal those chickens when they were roosting right under the owner's window, and there were two vicious dogs in the yard."

"Hit wouldn't do yer a bit of good, judge, for me to explain how I coteched dem chickens, for yer couldn't do hit yerself if yer tried hit forty times, and yer might get yer hide full ob buck-shot do berry fust time yer put yer leg ober do fence. De bes' way for you to do, judge, is fur yer to buy yer chickens in de market and when you wants ter commit any rascalidy do hit en de bench whar you am at home."—Sittings.

The horse of a Wilkinsburg (Pa.) dairyman has developed an extraordinary fondness for tobacco and will chew a ten-cent plug or half a pound of smoking tobacco mixed in his feed with the greatest relish. When a colt the animal was given small particles of the weed, until now, in the prime of life, he craves it the same as his ancestor.

"Yes," remarked a conceited young bachelor, "I have the greatest admiration for the fair sex, but I never expect to marry. Oh, dear, no." "Indeed," remarked a lady; "then I am to understand that you not only admire women, but have a sincere regard for them as well."
