The process of rolling cold iron owed its discovery to the merest accident. A foundryman, a workman at the rolls, In the County Court of the State of Oregon neglected to take his tongs from a har of heated iron in time, and they were carried through the rolls. Much to To James H Simmons and all persons inhis surprise, the tongs, instead of being terested in said estate: superintendent jumped at the conclusion that, if it were possible to roll cold iron once it could be done again.

An almanae 3000 years old, found in Egypt, is in the British museum. It is said to be the oldest in the world. It was found on the body of an Egyptian who had doubtless regarded it with as much reverence as he did the Egyptian Bible-"The Book of the Dead"-and, indeed, it is strongly re ligious in character. The days are written in red ink, and under each is a RHINEHART, J. B. - House, sign and car riage painter. Work guaranteed first class. figure, followed by three characters, signifying the probable state of the weather for that day. Like the other Egyptian manuscripts, it is written on papyrus. It is written in columns. It is not in its integrity, but was evidently torn before its owner died. It clearly established the date of the reign of Rameses the Great, but contains nothing else of value.

It is now alleged that Preller, the "trunk corpse of St. Louis, was not murdered, but that the body that created such a noisome sensation was that of a medical college student, the whole scheme being devised by Preller and Maxwell to get at a life policy of $20,000 which the latter held in Eug land. Just how the conspirators were going to manage to realize on the policy is not apparent, but the company in which Preller was insured do not propose to pay the amount until satisfied beyond doubt that the holder of the policy furnished his individual corpse for the trunk mystery.
