

GENERAL GRANT DEAD.

General U. S. Grant, the old hero, passed quietly away at Mt. McGregor, New York, Thursday morning at 8:08 o'clock. He had been suffering with cancer of the throat for a little over nine months, which at last resulted fatally. As the news passed through the land the people, without regard to party or past conditions, were sincerely sorrowful. General Grant was a remarkable man. He was the greatest general produced in America for years, and did more for the preservation of the Union in fact, he was the one man that effected the suppression of the rebellion. His soldiers fairly worshipped him. In mourning over his death it appears that the South is as sincere as the North, showing conclusively that we have a thoroughly united Republic and people. They admired his fighting qualities, and also the magnanimity shown after the surrender. His memory is written upon every true American heart, and will be preserved as long as the government exists. He made mistakes in his civil administration. But what human being has not? Let the mantle of charity cover his few faults, and only remember his great and good deeds, which were many. He had a large and warm heart. It is said he never forsook a friend. He was as true as steel. The names of Washington and Grant will always be held in high esteem and honor. The soldiers, the citizens, and all are bowed down in grief over his death. His family, and especially his wife, who is one of the noblest of women, have the heartfelt sympathy of the people of the Republic.

We take the following short biographical history of his life, which is familiar to nearly every one, from the Library of Useful Knowledge:

Ulysses Simpson Grant, eighteenth President of the United States, was born at Pleasant, Clermont county, Ohio, April 27, 1822; graduated at the military academy of West Point in 1843, and served under General Taylor in the war with Mexico, 1846, up to the capture of Monterey. His regiment was then transferred to the expedition under General Scott, and he took part in every action from Vera Cruz to Mexico, and was brevetted First Lieutenant and Captain for meritorious conduct at Molino del Rey and Chapultepec. In 1852 he served in Oregon; but in 1854 resigned his commission, and settled at St. Louis, Missouri, whence, in 1859, he moved to Galena, Illinois, and engaged in the leather trade. At the beginning of the war of secession in 1861, he volunteered his services, and was appointed Colonel of the Illinois regiment. In August he was appointed Brigadier General, commanding the important post of Cairo, occupied Paducah, and led an expedition on the Mississippi. In February, 1862, he distinguished himself in the capture of Fort Donelson, on the Tennessee river, and was made Major General. On April 6, following, after a preliminary defeat, he won a great battle over the Confederates at Pittsburg Landing, or Shiloh. Succeeding General Halleck in the west, he commanded the land forces which, in conjunction with the navy, reduced Vicksburg, July 4, 1863, soon followed by the fall of Fort Hudson, and the opening of the Mississippi. He then took command of the army of Tennessee, and defeated General Bragg at Chickamauga, in September of the same year; and was, in 1864, appointed Lieutenant General and Commander-in-Chief, and personally directed the operations of the great final struggle in Virginia, in which the Northern forces, though often repulsed with heavy losses, finally compelled the evacuation of Richmond, April 2, 1865, followed on the 9th by the surrender of the Confederate army under General Lee, and soon after of the entire Confederate forces. Congress, in recognition of his eminent services, passed an act reviving the grade of "General of the Army of the United States," to which Grant was immediately appointed. In 1868 he was elected, on the Republican platform, President of the United States; and having in 1872 been re-elected over Horace Greeley, he retired in 1877, after his second term of office. In the latter year Grant visited Europe, everywhere receiving a hearty welcome, and completed a tour round the world in 1879. Simple, reticent, earnest and persevering in his character, he owed his military success not so much to strategy as to superior numbers and resources, and hard fighting, in which even a series of victories left his enemy less able to resist. During Grant's Presidency a great reduction was made upon the national debt incurred during the civil war. The military government of the Southern States in those years cannot be regarded as successful. The most important event connected with relations to foreign states was the settlement of the Alabama question by the "joint high commission" in 1871.

The morals of the Republican party are good enough. It was the immoralities of the Congress that did the baseness for it.

Roach's Failure.

The assignment of John Roach, says the Portland Standard of the 24th, scores another victory for the present administration. It is a political rather than a commercial event—a natural result of the application of business principles to the conduct of public affairs. Does any one suppose the Dolphin would have been rejected under Blaine's administration? Or that Chandler's contracts would have been declared null and void? The deeper the knife goes the stronger the evidence of previous dishonesty in all the departments of government. This failure ought not have been a surprise. Mr. Roach has long been known to be incompetent as a ship builder, being thoroughly ignorant of correct lines and models. The best architects on the great lakes have always regarded him as an impostor who could not compete with honest workmanship except through the collusion of those in power. We were informed yesterday by a gentleman in this city who inspected them before they went into service, that both the City of Tokio and City of Pekin were so poorly constructed that over $200,000 were expended on each for repairs not long after they were built. The secretary of the Atlantic works, of Boston, where several monitors were built for the government during the war, assured the writer last fall that no establishment in this country could compete with John Roach, whose contracts were drawn so as to preclude the bid of every other bidder. That such a man has failed is a source of congratulation to every friend of honest administration.

The Republican papers a few weeks ago were yelling with delight because they claimed no rascals had been found by the administration. Now they are singing a different tune. They are busily engaged defending such rascals as Roach and Chandler. They plead the old worn out sympathy dodge. A rascal that will misappropriate government funds is not a proper subject for sympathy from honest men and women. The penitentiary is the proper place for such scoundrels. Has one stroke Secretary Whitney found where $2,000,000 were in the act of being stolen by the rascals. The honest men in the country will applaud the Secretary of the Navy in his good work.

The land thieves are in a state of excitement on account of the action of Commissioner Sparks in hunting up the land frauds that have been prevalent during the past twenty years. He has already declared forfeited millions of acres of unearned railroad grants, which will be given to the poor homesteader. He is an honest man and will expose every fraud that has been committed during the Republican rule. The rascals are now being found, and the average Republican organ is crying for "sympathy."

It appears from a Washington dispatch that there are more appeals for retention in office than there are applications for places in the public service. The incumbents who have so long enjoyed the honors and the profits of patronage are loath to resign them. They invoke the tenure of office act, the civil service act, and other expedients to prevent removal. Yet these are the people who read homilies to the Democrats on the disgraceful scramble for spoils.

"Why don't the Oregonians speak out on the extra session question?" is the inquiry we have heard from many of its readers in Lane county. Is it afraid to denounce the robbing of the people of Oregon of $30,000 for the sole purpose of electing a Republican U. S. Senator?

By order of the Secretary of the Treasury the force of the Portland Custom House has been cut down one-half, it having been found that they did nothing but draw good fat salaries on account of their work for the great moral party. And still "there was no rascals to be found."

The Democrats and Greenbackers of Iowa have fused. They claim they will route the grand old party of many dogmas and few principles at the election this fall. We hope they may be successful, as that State needs a good honest government once at least in a hundred years.

Hon. E. J. Dawne, of Salem, has been appointed Judge of the United States Court at Alaska by President Cleveland. Judge Dawne has the congratulations of his friends in this portion of Oregon.

The anticipated trouble between Russia and England has again blown over. And again our wheat growers are doomed to disappointment.

The "Southern Confederacy," as the Oregonian calls it, is a success at unearthing frauds.

What becomes of all the exuberantly effusive expression of opinion by our esteemed Republican contemporaries that no living man could be found to fill the place of James Russell Lowell in London, when the London Times emphatically declares that Mr. Phelps is the greatest Minister America ever sent to England!
