

SOMETHING NEW FOR HUNTERS AND SPORTING MEN.

The "Standard" Cartridge-Loaded by the Chamberlin Patent Automatic Machine.

The Automatic shotgun cartridge loading machine is destined to revolutionize the ammunition trade of the world. The manufacture of tools for hand-loading has virtually stopped, for the makers of hand-rammers, uncappers, recappers, reamers, and all the countless tools, etc., realize that the automatic machine-made cartridge has such a vast superiority over any other that it is only a question of a few months before it will monopolize the market.

The Chamberlin automatic machine was only invented in 1884, and was put to work at Cleveland, Ohio, by the Chamberlin Cartridge Company at once, and already their works are taxed to their full capacity, they being unable to supply the constantly increasing demand.

This machine will revolutionize the shotgun cartridge business, as did the sewing machine and cotton gin and reaper their lines of trade. None were quicker to realize this fact than Selby Smelting and Lead Co., the smelters and refiners, and immediately after the machine was shown here they purchased the patent right for all territory west of the Rocky mountains, including Montana, Colorado and New Mexico, and set to work to make cartridges.

In commencing they realized that they must make a superior article of uniform quality, and so they decided to put none but the best quality of goods on the market that so soon as their ammunition had once been used shooters could rely that it was all up to sample. They built a large cartridge factory close to their huge smelting and refining works at Vallejo Junction, Cal. Seven of the automatic machines were put up and are now in use and more machines will be put up as soon as needed to meet the large demand for these cartridges.

In this factory every part of the work of loading a shotgun cartridge is done by automatic machinery and in this the Chamberlin cartridges differ from other so-called machine cartridges, which are simply hand-made cartridges filled with an automatic filler, but rammed, wadded and reamed by hand, thus possessing none of the essential advantages of the all automatic machine-made goods. The superiority of the Chamberlin cartridges, arising from the fact that all the work is done by accurately-gauged automatic machinery, is obvious. Hand-rammed cartridges cannot be uniformly pressed, but the automatic machine loaders, graduated to a hair's breadth, coming down on every load with equal pressure, must of necessity do uniform and perfect work.

This machine is necessarily exactly accurate in the charge of powder and shot, and shooters using the Chamberlin cartridges so soon as they have got the gauge of their ammunition can depend upon every succeeding load firing as the other did, and no such reliance can be placed on hand-made or partially hand-made loads. Then, too, in the Chamberlin automatic machine the wads are all seated uniformly and evenly, which cannot be done by hand, and there is an even pressure on each. Each cartridge is reamed uniformly by an invention which Prentice Selby has added to the Chamberlin machine, and to make assurance doubly sure every one is tested in a size gauge, which rejects all that vary from the correct standard for the gun chamber, and no cartridge having passed this gauge can possibly jam in the gun. Each load is stamped by an automatic machine with the size, and all this work is done delicately and accurately at the rate of 1000 an hour for each machine. Recognizing the large investment they have at stake, the Selby Company use only the very best material in every respect, and owing to the automatic arrangements, no inferior grades could be substituted.

It is a most interesting sight to watch the manufacture of these "Standard" cartridges at the Vallejo Junction works. The machines are all run by a small compressed-air engine. Beside each one a man stands and feeds. The powder and shot are in large reservoirs, the wads in long tubes. The shells are placed on a long, sloping tray, and as the machine is started one is taken by an automatic grip, placed under the powder receiver, which it opens long enough to receive the stated load. It is then pressed under the wad tubes and the wad inserted and pressed down; then the shot, which is a card wad, and then it comes under the crimper, is crimped, stamped, tested and dumped into a pile—everything done with positive accuracy and precision and without the touch of a hand.

The Selby Company are now making forty-three different varieties of loads to suit all game, from sandpipers to geese, and can load any fancy lots which may be ordered at short notice. This is an immense advantage to the gun trade, for dealers having the Selby S. and L. Company to draw from need keep no large stock of material, on which they never realize much profit. These shells are guaranteed to keep perfect in any climate for ten years, and we have fired off an Ely paper cartridge pin fire for a Lefaucheur gun which had lain in a drawer for more than a dozen years.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

The temples in Dahomey are almost entirely built of human skulls. —Chili pays a bounty of five dollars a head for the scalps of condors, but the birds are so shy that it does not pay to hunt them.

A rock altar, with steps battered and weather-worn, has recently been discovered near Zorah, the home of Manoaah, the father of Samson.

The pavilion of Henry IV., at St. Germain, has been turned into a restaurant and people dine in the very room in which Louis XIV. was born.

The little town of Battenberg, from which the husband of Princess Beatrice and his brothers derive their title, has been part of the Prussian territory nearly nineteen years.

An invention which will be of great service has just been patented by Mr. Crammond, of Belfast. It shields the wheels of train cars so as to prevent the possibility of injury to any person from falling between them. Though simple it fulfills the purpose.

Including women and children whose live hood depends upon the establishment, there is in the Krupp iron works, at Essen, a working class population of not fewer than 60,281 persons, of whom nearly 29,000 live in houses owned by the works.

The Arabs made a pyramid of the skulls of Hicks' unfortunate command, which perished in the Soudan before Gordon went there. Of this expedition 10,000 soldiers, including 2,000 cavalry, perished, and 1,000,000 rounds of Birmingham ammunition, seven Krupp B Nordenfeli and twenty-nine mountain guns were captured.

A patriarchal couple living in the south of France have had twenty-seven children, of whom twenty-five are living, and three are serving in the army in Tonquin. The father and mother, aged respectively seventy-three and sixty-eight, cultivate a farm, aided by six other sons. Of their twenty-seven children, twenty-one were boys.

Out of 509 members of the House of Lords no less than 440 are landlords in the fullest sense of the term; that is, they derive the whole or greater part of their revenues from land. Fifteen million acres of land, with an annual rent roll of £15,000,000, represents their property and income, while another £750,000 in the shape of pensions, annuities, and salaries also falls annually to the lot of this privileged class.

Last autumn a bookseller named Meyer of Konneberg, tied a waterproof label under the wing of a swallow which had occupied a nest at his house and had become comparatively familiar. On it he wrote a query in German to the effect that he would like to know where the swallow would pass the winter. The bird returned to its former nest bearing an exchange label similarly fastened, saying in German: "In Florence, at Castellari's house, and I bear many salutations."

Among the flints of chalk formation is occasionally found one that emits a clear musical sound when struck with another flint. A Frenchman has just succeeded in making a "piano" from these musical stones. The flints are suspended by wires above a sounding board, and are played by two other flints. The stones of the piano number twenty-six, forming two chromatic octaves, and were collected with much patient labor, during a period of more than thirty years. There seems to be no relation between the sizes of the stones and their tones.

POCKET ELEPHANTS. A Collection of Pigmies—Horses as Large as Foxes, Etc.

"How is that for an elephant?" said an artist taking a green cloth from a clay model of an elephant about twelve inches in length. "Yes, it is small," he continued, "but that's just the great point in its favor. See this bone," he continued, taking up a small object from a table—"the real bone of the elephant I am making a model of. It was the famous recently discovered pigmy elephant of Europe. Some months ago a party of French geologists, rambling through Italy, came upon great quantities of these bones, and soon identified them as those of a race of elephants that were pocket elephants, so to speak. The largest were not as large as our sheep and in the adult form or old age much smaller than any of the baby elephants that have been exhibited in this country. Their young in turn were elephants in miniature, being about as large as a small cat, and could easily have been held upon the open palm. Herds of these pigmies were undoubtedly captured by early man, and if the circus was in existence then, we can imagine a rare entertainment. What a troupe of elephants could have been marshalled! First would appear the great Mammoth, with its long coat of hair; then the Pliocene, with its incurved tusks; the gigantic Ganges from India, with its hundred feet in front, and finally, last but not least, the pigmies and their young, arousing the enthusiasm of the throng of young cave-dwellers.

The pigmies, as far as known, represented two distinct species, known to science as Elephas melitensis and E. falconeri, and their remains are found over a wide geographical area, showing that they had an extended range. In the second book of the "Aeneid" Virgil notes a tradition to the effect that Sicily was at one time a part of the mainland, and it is now believed by many that long ago Italy was connected with Africa by a neck of land, and that Malta and other places, now islands, were a part of it. Over this ancient bridge the pigmy elephants are supposed to have made their way into Europe, where their tracks can be traced in many localities. In Malta most of the skeletons have been found, while others have been discovered in various parts of Italy, and among other remains in many parts of Europe. These were real pigmies, while the so-called dwarf elephants of to-day are merely elephants whose growth has been retarded in some natural or artificial manner.

The pigmies, however, were not all elephants, as at this time pigmy horses roamed the slopes and valleys of North America. They were the ancestors of our present horse, and their remains have been found in such quantities that more than twenty different kinds have been recognized. The smallest of these pigmy horses was about as large as a fox, and differed considerably from our present horse. It lived in what has been termed the Eocene time, and is called the Koldius. Instead of walking on the tip of a single toe or hoof, as does the horse of to-day, it had four well-developed toes and a rudimentary fifth. In a later bed of the same time is found the Orophippus—a pigmy horse with four perfect toes in front and three behind. A great many ages later, in beds of the Miocene time bones of the Mesobippus appear. Then the horse was as large as a sheep—equalling in size the pigmy elephant. Its feet were still divided as it had three toes and the splat of another in each forefoot, and three toes behind. Following this came other forms, as the Architherium; then the Hippation, as large as a donkey; and finally the Pliobippus, with a single toe on each foot, is found—the direct ancestor of our great horse of to-day, in the feet of which, if one carefully examines, are to be found rudimentary splint bones that are the representatives of the toes that were fully developed in the ancient forms. In Yale College a very complete set of these strange horses, from the pigmy form of long ago to the horse of to-day, can be seen, the result of the researches in the far West of Professor Marsh.

"A few months ago a pigmy whale was washed ashore on the New Jersey coast, and was sent to the National Museum. In appearance it resembled the enormous humpback, but instead of being sixty or eighty feet in length, and weighing several tons, it measured only nine feet in length, and was accompanied by a baby pigmy that was little over a foot long. The pigmy whales properly belong to the Pacific Ocean, and are often seen on the Californian coast; but this specimen probably strayed around the Horn, and with perhaps a few companions was wandering about the Atlantic, or, as some one suggested, waiting for the canal through the isthmus for a short cut home.

"Among the birds there is a pigmy quail—a delicate little creature, so small that the ancient Chinese used it to warm their hands in cold weather, carrying a bird in each closed palm. Among the quadrupeds the pigmy deer is perhaps the most interesting, and when seen it seems a perfect antelope in miniature. It is the Cephalopterus pygmaeus, and is confined to South Africa—a most delicate and fragile little creature, being hardly over twelve inches in length. The head is long and pointed, the ears short, and the horns like toy ones, and very delicate and slender, being less than two inches in height, highly polished, and jet black.

"Quite as much of a pigmy is the Sultana antelope, found in the hilly regions of Abyssinia. Its height at the shoulder is only fourteen inches; the horns are extremely thin and about four inches long. The young of these midgets of the hoofed tribe are beautiful little creatures, those of the antelope being about eight inches long when born, and with their soft-colored fur, delicate pipe-stem-like limbs, large and expressive eyes, they are, perhaps, the most attractive of any of the minute animals. I have," continued the artist, "nearly all these interesting creatures in my collection, and when placed together they present a striking and interesting appearance, telling a story of the curious modifications to which the various forms of life are subject. I am going to make a model of each one for a private museum, and they are to be placed in contrast with the giants. Thus the pigmy whale will be placed beside the right whale, the small elephant next to the giant mammoth, and so on in this way the great extremes of life are shown at a glance."—N. Y. Post.

A CHINESE RICKSHAW. The Astonishing Vehicle, Driven By A man, Foot, Trot, and Smooth.

Trot, trot, trot, along the smooth sunny, but bamboo-shaded, high road. I have a little leisure now to observe these astonishing rickshaw coolies. They wear the enormous traditional mushroom Chinese hat, suitable in case either of beating rain or fierce sun, under which are tucked their hard-plaited pig-tails—for even a coolie would feel himself disgraced were he minus a pigtail. They are bare-footed, bare-legged, bare-armed, and wear just sufficient rags to save themselves from the charge of indelicacy. Their skins are sallow, their Mongolian faces are pinched, their stature is small, their limbs seem attenuated and loosely put together. And yet these demoralized-looking wretches, to call them "brethren" is, indeed, a heavy demand on our charity, throw themselves forward into the shafts and drag their carriages with its passengers, who may be ten or may be twenty stone, not at a walk, or a shuffle, or an amble, but at a good round trot of about six miles an hour. They neither flag, pant, nor perspire, but keep up this pace for two or three miles at a stretch. Would not the most renowned European athlete or pedestrian be but a feeble coney in comparison? Moreover, these coolies have to content themselves at the end of their journey with five cents—a cent is a fraction less than a half-penny. They exult if they receive ten cents, and consider the donor an utter fool if he gives them fifteen cents.

The first sensations at being conveyed in a rickshaw are those of mingled amusement and shame. One likens oneself to a drunken masquerader or to an unostentatious buffoon. Then habit begets indifference. Dignitaries of the church, dignitaries of the Government, dignitaries of the law, soldiers, sailors, and even the well-to-do Chinese, all have recourse to them; and the sergeant in his rickshaw salutes the colonel in his rickshaw with precisely the same gravity as though both were on parade. Perhaps the full absurdity can be best realized by considering what would be the effect produced were the Dean of Westminster to be trundled in a wheelbarrow down Piccadilly by a dirty, ragged little London Arab.—Cornhill Magazine.

A CLERGYMAN'S REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE.

The following communications give the history of one of a class of cases especially found among clergy, and all professional men and brain workers. The character was in three months, as related by Dr. Cushing, pastor of the First M. E. Church, Rochester, N. Y., (a clergyman of wide repute, whose statement will not be questioned for a moment by those who know him), is truly marvelous: 16 N. FITZBURGH ST., ROCHESTER, N. Y., January 11, 1884.

DRS. STARKY & PALEN:—It is nearly four years since I first used Compound Oxygen. There are those, doubtless, who would be glad to know of its effects in a case like mine. For fifteen years I had been carrying heavy burdens and doing very hard work. I found myself gradually losing the power of endurance, so that my work left me much exhausted. I could see that my whole nervous system was giving way; that there was a manifest lack of vital force. This was most apparent and most alarming when I went to my study. My mind was losing its grip. Sleep was insufficient, and unrefreshing.

Under these circumstances I began the use of Compound Oxygen. At first I saw no results. After a time I observed my digestion was much improved. More restful sleep followed. At the end of three months I found myself able to preach Sunday morning, teach a Bible class of seventy-five or a hundred after a sermon, attend an afternoon service often, and preach to a congregation of a thousand persons in the evening, and say in truth, at the close of my evening service, that I was not conscious of any more weariness than when I began in the morning. My mind has never worked better than during these four years, and in no other time of my life could I do as much work, or do it with as much ease.

This is my experience, and I have much reason to be grateful for it. Sincerely, CHAS. H. CUSHING, D. D.

WHEN IN THE WRONG CHANNEL. The bile weakens grievous injury. Headaches, constipation, pain in the liver and stomach, jaundice, nausea ensue. A few doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will remove these evils and prevent further injury. It is a pleasant aperient, its action upon the bowels being unaccompanied by griping. The liver is both regulated and stimulated by it, and it is very impotent to disregard disorder of this organ, which through neglect may culminate in dangerous congestion and hepatic abscess. The Bitters should be resorted to at an early stage. Failure to do this renders a contest with the malady more protracted. Fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, are remedied by this fine medicine, and the increasing infirmities of age mitigated by it. It may be also used in convalescence with advantage, as it hastens the restoration of vigor.
