Thanksgiving Proclamation.

In accordance with a custom established by our forefathers, and in conformity with the proclamation of the President of the United States, I would recommend that Thursday, November 26, 1885, be observed as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and that, upon that day, all of the people of the State abstain from their usual avocations, and, repairing to their respective places of worship, do give thanks to the Supreme Ruler of the universe for the blessings vouchsafed to us during the past year, and for the promise of the future, and I would urge, as a suitable manifestation of gratitude to God, that, with open hands and generous hearts, you do upon that day devote, out of your abundance, that which will meet the wants and carry comfort to the hearts of the needy and destitute who are within the reach of our charity.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State of Oregon, this the 13th day of November, A. D. 1885.

Z. F. MOODY, Governor.

Attest: R. P. EARHART,

Secretary of State.

A Sermon to the Jury.

Not many months ago a jury in one of the city courts could not reach a verdict and it was necessary for it to be locked up from Friday to Monday morning. When Sunday came many of the members wanted to go to church, and they asked the colored bailiff who had charge of them if they could have the privilege. He was sorry that they could not. "But," said he, "gentlemen, if you want to hear a sermon, I'm a local preacher, and I can preach you one." Of course, they wanted it. A pulpit was improvised in the room, and the bailiff took a text and preached for over an hour on Ingersoll and infidelity. "And it was a mighty good sermon, too," said one of the jurymen.—Baltimore American.

From one of our Puget Sound exchanges we learn the particulars of a case that is likely to attract the attention of the medical fraternity. Chas. Case, who was employed as stevedore in loading a vessel at Tacoma, some time ago, retired one night as usual, and awoke the next morning to find that his eyesight had entirely departed during the night. He felt no approaching symptoms of the terrible affliction, that during a single night was to leave him stone blind. His friends took him to his home in Seattle, where experienced oculists were called in to treat a case of which medical history furnishes no parallel. At last accounts the unfortunate man was no better, and it is feared by friends that his sight is forever lost. To one who feels the approach of such a calamity, and thus nerves himself for the inevitable, it is bad enough, but to one who retires at night in the full enjoyment of all his faculties, only to wake in the morning stone blind, it must be terrible.

Logan's book is in the hands of the publishers. He entitles it "The great conspiracy; its history and origin." This does not allude, as might be supposed to the stealing of the Presidency in 1876. Perhaps Sherman will write a history of that, as he was one of the principal instigators and manipulators, and is denouncing Southern election frauds.

The Supreme Court of Indiana has decided that when property has been destroyed by fire from sparks negligently permitted to escape from a locomotive, the owner may recover its full value from the railway company, notwithstanding the fact that the property was insured and the insurance company has paid the loss.

Typesetting in Japan.

The advantages of alphabetic writing are nowhere more conspicuously shown than in a large printing office. The compositor stands within easy reach of every character he may have need of, and a boy can learn the position of each in the case in a few hours. It is quite another matter when each word has a distinct character, as in China and Japan. A correspondent, describing the office of a Japanese paper, says that a full font of Japanese type comprises 7,000 characters, of which 3,000 are in constant use, and for 2,000 more there are frequent calls. The type is disposed about the composing-rooms on racks, like those in a reading-room, and the compositor wanders up and down the aisles, setting type and taking exercise at once. With so many characters it is no wonder that Japanese proof-readers have to be men of intelligence and high scholarship. The impossibility of telegraphing single-character words has kept this great instrument of civilization in foreign hands, and made it practically useless for the natives of China and Japan. To these the telephone is an especial blessing, which they are not slow to appreciate.—Printers' Circular.

In a published letter to Land Commissioner Sparks, T. S. Lang, of The Dalles, shows the amount of lands held in this State by four corporations. The Northern Pacific and the Willamette Valley and Cascade Mountain road, The Dalles Military road and the Oregon Military road. These companies hold land as follows: First, the Northern Pacific railroad holds in Oregon 279 townships; second, the Willamette Valley and Cascade Mountain wagon road, 144 townships; third, Oregon Military road, 143 townships; fourth, the Dalles Military wagon road, 154 townships, aggregating 739 townships, each containing 36,000 acres, aggregating 17,000,000 acres.

Chinese pheasants, with all their winsome ways and long tails, are said to be the most destructive bird known when it comes to making an attack on a shock of wheat. Not satisfied with getting enough to eat they overhaul the whole shock, scratching the wheat in every direction. When it comes to fighting, a game cock is said to stand no chance with them. One good sized Chinese pheasant will "clean out" a whole barn yard of roosters.—Albany Democrat.

"Do you never get tired?" asked a visitor the other day of First Assistant Postmaster General Stevenson, whom he found in his shirt sleeves, wiping out his 200th offensive partisan for the day. "The same question," replied Mr Stevenson, "was asked of a Scotch clergyman who used to preach three hours at a time. With the clergymen I may say 'I do find it a wear but tiresome, but eh! mon, you should see how tired the other folks be!'"

The conviction of two such men as Fish and Ward can hardly fail to exercise a salutary effect on the class of men to which they belonged. From the splendor of Fifth avenue existence to the bare cell and coarse fare of the felon the fall is terrible; and the prospect of incurring such a fate may well deter many would-be imitators of the "young Napoleon of finance" from treading in his footsteps.—N. Y. Tel.

"Is Washington's birthday observed in Texarkana?" asked a New Yorker who was visiting San Antonio. "Observed!" exclaimed the astonished native, "why it's venerated. It takes four carloads of beer to fill the demand on that sacred day."

Thirty-five states and territories are now represented by exhibits at New Orleans, Nov. 30th. It is said that all available space has been spoken for, and that the exhibits from Europe and elsewhere will be extensive.

The Republicans still hold 44,000 fourth class Postmasters to the Democrats 7,000. The equilibrium is still a good ways off.

Vanadium, a white metal, discovered in 1830, is worth $10,000 a pound. It is used in newspaper offices only for paper weights.
