

A Modern Miracle.
(Harry J. Shellen.)
As I was sayin', pardner—the sam' stuff as before—
It was a sort o' miracle that saved the town from goin' to the dogs.
Or if it wasn't no miracle, I've got the gold to stake
That you'll admit the circumstance a curious mistake.

We come together at a bar down thar at Cherokee
And kinder thought that jintly we would have a jamboree,
For after we'd a drink or two we sorter friends became,
Because we found that both were thar on business the same.

Says he to me: "Now, pardner, I'm lookin' for a shoat
Wat's called the 'Jumprin' Jimprute,' a snakein', mean coyote,
I hear war comin' up to town, a braggin' wat he'd do
If ever he could get a chance with some folks that I knew."

"Just put it thar, pard. Shake!" says I, a orderin' up "the same."
"I rather reckon that our hunt are after sim'lar game;
I'm lookin' for a blowin' cuss who takes a sight o' pains
To get himself called Broncho Pete, the Terror of the Plains."

"We'll hunt for them together then," says he, "and if we get
A chance at them—" "Of course," says I, "we'll chaw 'em up, you bet."
And then we hunted through the town and pointed it so red
It made folks think they'd Rory-Bory-Allice overnead.

But never did we get a sight of any derned galoot
That answered to the cognomens we'd bust upon the snoot,
And though we hunted lively like and kept it up all night,
We couldn't find a citizen wat had the sand to fight.

As I was sayin', pardner—just order up the same—
It was a sort o' miracle, or some such kind o' game;
For nothin' could have saved that town from carnage in the street,
If he'd knowed I war "Jumprin' Jimpr," and I'd knowed he war "Pete."

Provoked Profanity.
(Stuff and Nonsense, Chas. Scribner's Sons.)

This man with a shiny bald head;
Took his paper and quietly read,
Till a bee with a sting,
At his scalp took a fling.

When he said things much better unsaid.

A Remedy that Succeeded.
(Boston Globe.)

At Quittman, Ga., has recently invaded a church in such vast numbers that they succeeded in driving the congregation out pell mell. For some time the people were at their wits' end to think of some scheme by which the pests could be routed out. At last an old deacon suggested that they build a snail's pace of pine needles, and it had the desired effect. The fleas all disappeared, as if by magic, and as soon as the asbes got cold where the church stood the people intend to erect a new structure.

The Major Will Know Better Next Time.
(Boston Journal.)

"He's not what you call strictly handsome," said the major, beaming through his glasses on a homely baby that lay howling in his mother's arms, "but it's the kind of face that grows on you." "It's not the kind of face that ever grew on you," was the indignant and unexpected reply of the maternal being; "you'd be better looking if you had."

In no Danger of Slander.
(Washington Hatchet.)

A Washington physician was discussing his enemies in Judge Mackay's office. Among other things he said:
"I know, judge, my patients never slander me nor criticize my knowledge and treatment."
"No," replied the judge, with a sly twinkle of the eye, "dead men tell no tales."

The Old and the New in Art.
(The Rambler.)

Picture dealer—Let me call your attention to this Murillo, very old, formerly hung in the Vatican gallery, also in the Louvre.
Mr. Startup—Of course; that makes it second hand. How much off on that account?

Only a Slight Unpleasantness.
(Life.)

"What was the trouble at church this morning?" inquired one Dakota citizen of another. "I understand there was a row."
"Oh, it didn't amount to anything. Some of the members in the back pews threatened to shoot the minister unless he spoke louder. That was all."

From the Future Editor.
(Norristown Herald.)

"Say," said the editor's smart little son, as he entered a store, "do you keep knives?"
"Oh, yes," responded the storekeeper.
"We've kept them for years, starting for the door," you ought to advertise, and then you wouldn't keep 'em so long."

Chicago News: Customer—Have you some good imported cigars?
New Clerk—Not just now, but we shall have in about an hour. The printer around the corner is at work on the labels now.

Post: Globe: A New York contemporary has the caption "Pharaoh's Son Drowned." Singular coincidence that the boy should meet with the same fate which overtook his father.

BY ELECTRICITY.

Ladies Favored with Hirsute Adornments Have Them Removed by Battery.
It was the face of a handsome brunette just verging into womanhood. On her upper lip and slightly shading its scarlet hue, grew a dark, silken mustache that on a dude would have been cherished and cultivated as the choicest treasure on earth. Her head rested in a metal plate connected by a wire with a galvanic battery on the table. The doctor took up from the table at his elbow something that looked like an ebony pen staff. This also was connected with the battery. In the end was a very fine gold-plated needle. The doctor looked cautiously over the young lady's dainty little mustache, and at length, singling out a hair, inserted the point of the needle down by the hair bulb and, pressing a little spring in the handle, turned on the current from the battery.

When the electric current ran down the point of the little needle the young lady winced and clenched her hands, while the tears came to her eyes. This lasted only for a moment, for as soon as a little froth appeared around the needle it was removed and the hair dropped out. After forcing out about a dozen hairs on each side of the lip the doctor stopped. The young lady removed her head from the metal plate, wiped her face with a scented pocket handkerchief and tripped gaily to the mirror. She took a long glance of intense satisfaction, and gleefully remarked that they would soon all be gone. Then she put on her hat and left, after having made an appointment for another sitting.

"So you remove mustaches from the young ladies who are unfortunate enough to have such hirsute adornments?" remarked the reporter. "Will you tell me how it is done?"
"The operation is not very new," was the reply. "It has been known and practiced for several years, especially in the East. The electric current decomposes the salt in the skin into acid, which goes to the metal plate, and alkali, which accumulates around the needle and destroys the hair bulb so that the hair can never reappear. This method is also very useful in removing the ugly bristles that grow in moles, for the hairs are then large in size and few in number. It is only necessary to spend a few seconds on each hair, and but a few minutes on a dozen, after which a rest of several days is taken to allow the inflammation to disappear before undertaking any more."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

STRONG MEN.

Some of the Feats Performed by Thomas Topham, an English Hercules.

Many stories of strong men and extraordinary feats of strength are to be found in the annals of all countries. Ancient history abounds in them, and the hero of the medieval chronicles in this respect was Caesar Borgia, who, it was said, could fell a bullock by a blow at his fist. One of the most extraordinary athletes that England has produced was Thomas Topham, who was born in London in 1711. The first proof he gave of his prodigious strength was pulling against a horse in Moorfields, and afterwards lifting a rolling stone eight hundred pounds weight, with his hands only, standing in a frame above it, and taking hold of a chain that was fastened to it. He could roll up a powder dish of seven pounds as easily as another man could a sheet of paper; hold a quart pot at arm's length and squeeze the sides together like an egg-shell; lift two hundred weight with his little finger, and move it gently over his head; he could lift an oak table six feet long, to which half a hundred weight was attached, with his teeth, and, resting it against his knees, hold it in a horizontal position for a considerable time. He raised with one hand a man who weighed twenty-seven stone. His head he laid upon one chair and his feet upon another, four people, fourteen stone each, sat upon his body, which he heaved at pleasure. He could strike a round bar of iron about a yard long and three inches in diameter against his naked arm, and at one stroke bend it like a bow. He lifted two hogheads of water, heaved his horse over a turnpike gate, and carried the beam of a house across his shoulders as easily as another man would a rifle. Once, finding a watchman asleep in his box in Chiswell Street, Moorfields, he took up the box and man in his arms, carried them some distance, and then dropped them over the railings into a place called Tyndall's Burying-ground. There was nothing of the giant in his appearance; he was in height about five feet ten, well made, but not strikingly so, and walked with a slight limp; but what were hollows under the arms and hams in other men were in him filled up with muscle. He once made a wager that three horses could not draw him from a post, round which he clasped his feet, and it was only by giving them a sudden lash and a twist that the driver succeeded in doing so and in breaking Topham's thigh at the same time.—Chicago Interior.

Art in Texas.

Quincy V. Bates, of Dallas, Texas, is a young gentleman who has learned painting. He paints portraits. He painted a picture for Alderman McCargo, a cynical old cuss. Bates took the picture to the Alderman's office. The old man put on his specs, and after looking at it for some time, said:
"It is a splendid picture. The coloring is very fine. I am perfectly delighted with it. There is only one thing about it that is not quite right."
"What is that?"
"There is not a particle of resemblance to me about it."
"Resemblance! Resemblance! So that's what you are after, is it? If that's what you want, why don't you go to a photographer? I am an artist," and taking up the picture the artist stove his fist through it and walks off with the frame under his arm, using frightful language.—Texas Siftings.

—The Chicago Current is inclined to believe that the system of standard time has lessened the number of railway accidents.

Delicate persons, and all whose systems have become debilitated, should bear in mind that Simmons' Liver Regulator is not a drastic, purging medicine, does not purgative or deplete the system as other purgatives do, but acts gently. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is not intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, disipate headache and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted.
