Chinese Killed by Indians.

The first massacre of Chinese in the United States took place in Idaho in 1868, when seventy of them were killed by the Indians. They had left the mines of Nevada and were proceeding in a band to the Territory of Idaho in search of work. It was the first time Chinamen had ever been seen by the Shoshone Indians and they were the last they wanted to see. A freighter who was well known to the Indians camped near where the massacre took place on the day following, and the Shoshone chief explained to him how it all happened. "Mebbe so, mebbe not; he no white man, he no nigger, he no Injun. He go quack! quack! like um duck. He no good; Injun kill um all." The Shoshone then went through the motion of pulling the queues and lifting the heathen scalps with many grimaces and to the great delight of the freighter. —Baker City Democrat.

The process of restoring a characteristic old wooden church at Hopperstad, in the Harde district of Sogne, in Norway, has brought to light a Norwegian medieval relic. In a closed niche book, consisting of six wax tablets, was found carefully inclosed in a casket of wood and leather. The tablets are of boxwood covered with wax, each tablet having a thin border, so as to prevent the tablets from sticking together on closing the book. This precaution has helped to keep it in excellent preservation. The contents are chiefly drawings, made by a fine style, representing scenes from village and rural life.

At the end there is a large catalogue in Latin of various kinds of animals, with a translation into old Norwegian, and from this it has been conjectured that the greater portion of the book dates from the thirteenth century. But there are indications that part of the book is of earlier date. The tablets are fastened together at the back, and the cover is carved and inlaid with various small pieces of different colored woods. The book has been placed in the Museum of Antiquities in the University of Christiania, and it is intended to publish it shortly in facsimile.

It is predicted that, in the course of the next five years, the steel nail will have as completely supplanted the iron nail as the steel rail has its iron predecessor. Already one-half of the nails manufactured in Wheeling are made of steel, and the machinery and plant necessary for their manufacture are being set up in every nail centre and at nearly every nail foundry. It is said that, under present conditions, steel nails can be made about ten cents per keg cheaper than those made of iron, even where the manufacturer has to purchase his ingots.

Many of the new Democratic post-masters in the small towns where the salaries are regulated by the number of letters mailed are complaining to the Postmaster General that they are boycotted by the friends of their Republican predecessors, so that their compensation will be greatly cut down. Dozens of letters containing these complaints are received at the department every day. At Illery, Ill., the mail is collected by a private agency and delivered on the mail train to deprive the new appointee of his patronage and revenue. And so in many other places.

For Dancers.

Allen Dodworth has published in a manual of dancing explicit instructions as to the proper attitude to assume toward your partner (feminine) in round dances. Many young gentlemen might profit by following Mr. Dodworth's rules, and by taking timely warning of these additional suggestions, &c. g.:

One arm is enough to put around the lady at one time; the ambidextrous position known in the West as the "double hug" is neither refined nor pleasing to the eye. Nor is it necessary; the young lady will not try to get away until the music stops, if her partner is respectfully skillful.

You will notice, sometimes, at gentlemen's balls, that some of the gentlemen hold their partners much as if they were hose. That is not the way; the men that keep them at a distance, as if they were the fire, are nearer right.

Do not squeeze the young lady while dancing. If it is necessary to your happiness to embrace her it is better taste to choose a retired part of the conservatory after the dance is over. The snapping of ribs around a ball room irritates the musicians.

While avoiding undue compression of your partner, do not allow her to forget that you are there. Unless your rudder has been temporarily unshipped it is your duty to steer. If she will not allow you to do so it is proper to ask her to take you to your mother.

It is in this country the lady's privilege to stop waltzing when she is tired. The man may keep on until she stops. If he has a pedometer in his trouser-pocket he should not look at the dial until after he has taken her to her seat. To pull it out at the end of a long waltz and announce the miles is a bad form. Equally ill bred it is to mop the brow ostentatiously and say "Gosh!"—Puck.

Lost His Grip.

The man who has lost his grip deserves more attention than he usually receives. He is an old friend. Everybody knows him. He is a man who lives, not from choice, but from necessity on a diet of cold shoulder. It seems impossible for a man who has completely lost his grip to ever regain it. He may be a steam engine in breeches, and a model of good conduct and integrity, but his energy and ability will go for nothing. It is useless for him to assert himself and make a decided stand. The tide is against him, and he cannot successfully breast it. Why is this? To this question all sorts of answers have been given.

The fact that our unfortunate acquaintance once had a grip indicates that he at one time in his career possessed some of the essentials belonging to the make-up of a successful man. The explanation of his hopeless and helpless "flap" involves the analysis of the leading conditions of success and failure.

In the first generation a man rears only two ancestors, his father and mother. In the second generation the two are changed into four, since he had two grandfathers and two grandmothers. Each of these four had two parents, and thus in the third generation there are found to be eight ancestors—that is eight great-grandparents. In the fourth generation the number of ancestors is sixteen, in the fifth thirty-two, in the sixth sixty-four, in the seventh 128, in the tenth 1,024, in the twentieth 1,048,576, in the thirtieth 1,073,741,834. This may prove that all the world's skin.

The woman who orders a spool of thread sent by express is not so rare as some imagine. At a dry goods counter one day last week were two ladies. One of them was the daughter of a very rich man, whose father was rich before him, and the other was the wife of a man who had suddenly acquired wealth. The last mentioned ordered a very small package to be sent home, and the first took a good-sized bundle under her arm and walked up the street with an independence worthy of admiration.—Boston Budget.

Matches.

Let me take a single example of how even a petty manufacture improved by the teachings of science affects the comforts and enlarges the resources of mankind. When I was a boy the only way of obtaining a light was by the tinder box and its quadruple materials—flint and steel, burned rags or tinder and a sulphur match. If everything went well, if the box could be found and the air was dry, a light could be obtained in two minutes; but very often the time occupied much longer, and the process, became a great trial to the serenity of temper. The consequence of this was that a fire or a burning lamp was kept alight through the day. Old Gerard, in his "Herbal," tells us how certain fungi were used to carry fire from one part of the country to another. The tinder-box long held its position as a great discovery in the arts. The pyxidicula signaria, of the Romans appears to have been much the same implement, though a little ruder than the flint and steel which Philip the Good put in the collar of the Golden Fleece in 1429 as a representation of high knowledge in the progress of the arts. It continued to prevail till 1833, when phosphorus matches were introduced, though I have been amused to find that there are a few venerable ancients in London who still stick to the tinder-box, and for whom a few shops keep a small supply. Phosphorus was new discovery, for it had been obtained by an Arabian called Bechel in the eighth century. However, it was forgotten and was rediscovered by Brandt, who made it out of very stinking materials in 1669. Other discoveries had, however, to be made before it could be used for lucifer matches. The science of combustion was only developed on the discovery of oxygen a century later. Time had to elapse before chemical analysis showed the kind of bodies which could be added to phosphorus so as to make it ignite readily. So it was not till 1833 that matches became a partial success. Intolerably bad they were, dangerously inflammable, horribly poisonous to the makers, and injurious to the lungs of consumers. It required another discovery by Schrotter in 1845 to change poisonous wax into innocuous red-brick phosphorus in order that these defects might be remedied and to give us the safety match of the present day.

A historical joke is perpetrated by almost every Maine Legislature. A Biddeford man tells one, the butt of which was Judge Nathaniel Kimball, who is a wag himself. Judge Kimball drew a petition for the protection of smelts in Sandy Brook, secured a large number of signatures, and sent it to the Legislature. It was read in the house and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, who reported it expedient to place an armed force on the brook under the command of Gen. George Washington Whitten. A lot of these old Legislative jokes will be resurrected at the coming reunion.

A white man from away down South in the Okonchoben lake region came up to Gainesville last week on business at the United States Land Office. While here he saw the first ice he had ever seen. He manifested a great interest in the frigid substance, and put a half pound lump in his pants pocket to take home to his family. He soon took it out of his pocket, however, and as he did so said: "I am afeerd it will spile my terbacker."—Florida Ex.
