Artemus Ward Failed to Bring Down His House,

[Howard Paul in N. Y. World.] Before I ventured to storm the said Artemus Ward to mi, ght I'd take a modest turn in some of towns and villages up through New rk state, and I settled to begin at an outplace called Goshen, a great cheese and tter depot. My agent was an advertis-field named John P. Smith, who stuck nothing as far as printer's ink was connothing as tar as printers the was con-rned, and was a bit of a wae in his way. a promised to do his level best to make a lecture a success. We gut up at the incipal inn and distributed a hatful of tickets, so as to be sure of a decent owd in the hall. Well, everything was readiness, and at the last moment I sent Smith, who was to tend door. I said, ohn, I feel shaky and nervous, and I wish, ter the people get well in you'd give me "Lacve it to ma,' said Smith, encourag-gly, 'Pil fix all that.'

"At the proper time I presented myself to e expectant public. I was rigged out in white vest and tie, and looked as insipid a boiled fowl. I didn't get a hand. nith was too busy collecting the tickets look after my entrance, so my sand-off us not stimulating. I began my lecture a slow, measured tone of voice, and you ight have beard a cannon ball drop or the ling of a pocket bandkerchief. At any te they were attentive, I thought; so I off in due course what I considered a They didn't take it. I paused; then ent on. By and by I let off anotherme result; then another, and Smith, who algot through his ticket collecting and ted himself among the people, began applaud lustily.

"My experience of sympathetic city auences had previously suggested that hen some one boidly and bravely leads The applause others usually follow, but t Goshen this habit did not obtain. A man ell up in front cried, 'Silence! H-i.s-h!
"Again I proceeded, and told them a ary that many a time and off I had rewith screaming success in private reles. Smith this time set up a terrific uffaw, stamped and clapped his hands nd rocked backward and forward as ough he was utterly overcome by my nor. The audience were not to be lured to following his example. "Silence! shouted one.
"Don't interrupt the speaker!" howled

"Turn him out!' roared a third.

"And half the audience rose to see who ad caused what they thought an unmly and riotous interruption in the evanemly and riotous interruption in the even-ng's proceedings. A farmer-looking man ear Smith had a thick stick in his hant and a menacing look in his eya. I thought e meant business and would go for him. had come to a dead standstill, and my gent saw his opportunity. He leaped on ne of the empty chairs and proceeded to ddress the audience.

He leaped on one of the empty chairs.

"'Ladies and gentlemen,' shricked he, 'I a free and enlightened citizen of this glorious republic, and I claim the proud privilege of enjoying Mr. Arcemus Ward's mecdotes. When I enjoy anything I laugh out lou i, and when I laugh I make a noise. cast no reflections on you, my fellowitizens, but it's clear to me your heads are to thick for Mr. Ward's stories to penetrate. I'—the rest of the sentence was lost in the confusion that followed: "'Out with him?'

"'Who is he? "'Hi! Hi! Pitch him in the pond!"

"'Dry up!"

"And hundreds of similar observations rent the air. I pantomimed to Smith to withdraw. He obeyed, and, peace being restored, I proceeded. This episode rather amused me, and I fell into my best vein. I told them anecdote after anecdote, story after story, and fired off a fusilade of crisp and biting jests. It was no use, I could not for the soul of me rouse them to any outward expressions of appreciation or enjoyment. Then I lelt vexel; at last I grew whimsically vicious in my despair. In for a penny, in for a pound, thought I, when I suddenly stopped, and, glaring defantly at a certain man in the audience, I pointed at him with my index finger, and, looking at my watch said. looking at my watch, said:

" Ladies and gentlemen, for three-quarters of an hour I have been trying my hardest to dig a laugh out of you. Up to now I haven't succeeded. I don't wish to be personal, but if that man with the red hair and the long noss doesn't laugh soon I shall stop this solemnity and go and bang

"Now, mark the provincial mind," re-marked Artemus, "The audience, who had passed over some mighty fine wheezes and a few well-crusted Joe Millers, regarded this aliusion to the red-haired man with the long nose as a tremendous local joke, which they thoroughly understood, and they simply howled. It is true I had not calculated on this combined result of audacity and accident; but I felt that the audience had had something for their money, and had not left their homes entirely in vain.

"The audience rolled out, chattering away, and my faithful J. P. Smith stood at the door to collect opinions.
"What did they seem to say? I asked, when we got to the hotel, and were totaling up the receipts.

"Say,' replied Smith; 'well, I wouldn't like to repeat all I heard, but one man said he guessed you were laughing at them in your sleeve, and that you were a darned fraul, anyhow, and gently insignated that the next time you visited Gosnen you'd better have your life insured. Another man said you might be smart enough for some towns, but you wasn't up to the mark for Goshen.

"Eere the landlord of the Buck joined us. He seemed a good-natured man, and I ventured to ask him what he thought of my "Wall, said he, with crushing urbanity, while a frank expression dancel into his bonest bine eyes, "Ididn't quite get a grip of what you were preachin about. How Mark Twain Came to Join the Confederate Army. I was visiting in the small where my boyhood had been spent-Hannibal, Marion County. Several of us got together in a secret place by night and formed ourselves into a military company. One Tom Lyman, a young fellow of a good deal of spirit but of no military experience, was made Captain; I was made second Lieutenant. We had no first Lieutenant; I do not know why; it was long ago. There were fifteen of us. By the advice of an innocent connected with the organization we called ourselves the Marion Rangers. I do not remember that any one found fault with the name. I did not; I thought it sounded quite well. The young fellow who proposed this title was perhaps a fair sample of the kind of stuff we were made of He was young, ignorant, good-natured, well-meaning, trivial, full of romance and given to reading heroic novels and sing forlorn love-ditties. He had some pathetic little nickel-plated aristocratic instincts, and detested his name, which was Dunlap; detested it, partly because it was nearly as common in that region as Smith, but mainly because it had a plebeian sound to his ear. So he tried to ennoble it by writing it in this way: d'Unlap. That contented his eye, but left his ear unsatisfied, for people gave the new name the same old pronunciation—emphasis on the front end of it. He then did the bravest thing that can be imagined, a thing to make one shiver when one remembers how the world is given to resisting shams and affections—he began to write his name so: d'Un Lap. And he waited patiently through the long storm of mud that was flung at this work of art, and he had his reward at last; for he lived to see that name accepted, and the emphasis put where he wanted it, by people who had known him all his life, and to whom the tribe of Dunlaps had been as familiar as the rain and the sunshine for forty years. So sure of victory at last is the courage that can wait. He said he had found, by consulting some ancient French chronicles, that the name was rightly and originally written d'Un Lap; and said that if it were translated into English it would mean Peterson; Lap, Latin or Greek, he said, for stone or rock; same as the French pierre, that is to say, Peter; d', of or from; un, a or one; hence d'Un Lap, of or from a stone or a Peter; that is to say, one who is the son of a stone, the son of a Peter-Peterson. Our militia company were not learned, and the explanation confused them; so they called him Peterson Dunlap. He proved useful to us in his way; he named our camps for us, and he generally struck a name that was "no slouch," as the boys said.—Mark as the boys said .- Mark Twain, in Century.

NEW YORK PAUPERS.

No Class of Workers Exempt from Absolute Pauperism.

A gentleman who is connected with a charitable organization that contributed to the relief of about nine thousand distressed people in this city during the past year, when speaking of the liability of different grades of working persons to come to want, said: "My experience shows that no class is exempt from absolute pauperism, but it is very plain that some trades furnish better livelihoods than others, and that any trade is better than no trade, unless it is the trade of seamcalled on to relieve 549 laborers and decision of the Supreme Court, to imonly 55 carpenters, 79 'longshoremen and 7 plumbers, and that shows, too, the difference between trades. Among builders we notice a striking pecu-liarity. Relief was given to 86 painters and 26 masons and bricklayers, while only 6 hod carriers were found to be in need. I think this is due to the solid front presented by the Hod Carriers' Union. Among the metal workers we relieved 12 brass fitters, 7 boiler makers, 23 blacksmiths, 26 machinists, 13 molders and 15 tinsmiths. I was somewhat astonished to find that 21 engineers were needy. They were men trained to care for stationary engines in bearly all cases. Horsemen seem to as well off as most wage-workers. We relieved 19 coachmen, 63 drivers and 23 truck drivers. The clerks and salesmen relieved numbered 105, but the saleswomen numbered only 5. Against this small number we have to place 389 seamstresses and 656 washers and scrubbers. There are 34 nurses on our lists also. The servants of the city, considering their number, are not badly off. We relieved 49 cooks, 64 waiters and 35 other servants. Among other trades we supplied the wants of 41 printers, 1 press-feeder, 2 shoe cutters, 1 trapeze At Be performer, 67 tailors, 1 undertaker, 3 watchmakers, 1 rope maker, 5 milliners, 4 paper hangers, 18 seamen and 3 photographers. The profe sions were not exempt, for we had 5 physicians, 1 organist, 5 clergymen, 13 teachers, 4 lawyers, 4 artists and 1 editor. There are no paupers among the reporters."

-Attention is called in German medical journals to the fact that, so far back as 1849 the usefulness of inoculation with rabies-poison, as an antidote and preventive against the effects of bites by mad dogs, was discussed in Jahr's Klinischen Anweisungen, in the articles on 'Poisoning' and 'Dog-Ra-bies.' Constantine Hering, a physi-cian then living in Philadelphia, is there mentioned as having actually made use of this remedy.

-A very conceited author was in the habit of presenting autograph copies of his works to his friends. On one occa-sion he presented a lady, who was a relative, a Bible as a birthday present. She asked him to write her name in it. He did so, inscribing the sacred vol-ume to her as a gift "From the author."-N. Y. Ledger.

—When a young and beautiful but in poor girl marries a rich o'd man, it may be that she loves him truly and it sincerely, but it is all the world to an | in orange that she'll never repeat the experience if she becomes a young widow, it will remove all these feelings and make says a wise old man.—Boston Tost.
