A Bold Robbery.

About 10 o'clock last night, says an Ochocho Review extra of April 6th, John Backus, who works in County Treasurer J. T. Bushnell's saddle and harness shop, went to the shop for the purpose of going to bed, and found that the safe had been opened and robbed. He immediately ran to Mr. Bushnell's house and gave the alarm. Sheriff Blakeley was waked and search was made, but no trace of the thief was found.

The building had been entered by knocking a board off the side, and the safe unlocked and contents taken without creating any suspicion, which, as the shop had only been closed about two hours and during the time persons had been passing along the street almost constantly, makes the robbery rather a mystery. The safe was one of the old style Hall's pattern, which locks with both combination and key, could not be opened by a person not knowing the combination nor without a key, without injuring the door. No one except Mr. Bushnell had a key to the safe, and were his character not beyond reproach, suspicion might rest upon him as the guilty party, but Mr. Bushnell is too well known for anyone to believe that he could have been in any way implicated.

The losses were, county funds $2,905; $210 on deposit belonging to A. Andrews, and $70 belonging to Mr. Bushnell. The County Court, which is at present in session, offers a reward of $50 for the arrest and conviction of the thief.

Extent of the Poultry Industry.

For the year 1883 the poultry product of this country was $500,000,000. Under an equal division each man, woman and child in the country would have paid over $11 to the poultry farmers. But we paid more than that, for we imported about half as much as we produced. China alone sent us 12,000,000 eggs. These are tremendous figures. Our poultry interest, it seems, is more than double the value of the dairy interests. It was worth in 1883 $150,000 more than the cotton product of that year. In the past two years a great advance has been made in this industry in the Ohio Valley. The State Fair last Fall and the poultry show the past Winter have proved that. Small and large farmers, and persons having but small lots and back yards, have been penetrating the mysteries and cultivating the different breeds of Cochins, Brahmas, Hainburgs, Black Spanish, Wyandottes, Plymouth Rocks, Andalusians, and all the others for all they are worth. It was but a short time ago that an Ohio man refused $50 for a nine-month old rooster; had demands for all the eggs his fowls could produce at $3 per "setting," and had to rent several hens at $5 each for two months in order to keep up with the demands for eggs.—Wheeling (W. Va.) Register.

A dispatch from Baltimore, April 6th, says Captain Todd, of the British steamer Sarah Ann, reports that on March 7th, in a storm, a dismasted vessel was sighted, which proved to be the French barkentine Dix Freres, from Martinique, loaded with sugar for Boston. Captain Todd sent a boat loaded with oil bags hung around it through a terrible sea to the barkentine. The captain and mate were intoxicated and refused to leave, shouting that they intended to sink with the ship. The captain also held on to his little boy, although the child was crying to be rescued. Four of the sailors were taken off, and one sailor lay dead on the deck. The barkentine sailed for Martinique on December 30th, and lost her masts fifteen days after, and had been drifting about two months. The survivors say the master and mate were always drunk, as there was plenty of rum on board. The cargo of sugar had dissolved and had been pumped overboard.

Three territorial prisoners confined in the Kittitas county jail recently made their escape by cutting off the hinges of the door and scaling a fifteen-foot fence. Parties are in pursuit, but as yet no trace of the escapes has been obtained.

No Hunting a Job.

The Earl and Countess of Rosse have left Birr Castle for Biarritz, but will not make a long stay abroad, as his lordship much dislikes being parted from his beloved workshops. There are few better mechanical engineers in the country than Lord Rosse, and if the fates had not decreed that he should be born a peer and the heir to a fine estate, he would undoubtedly have made a great name for himself in the scientific world. There is a good story told of his visiting a large factory in the north of England a few years ago, when one of the partners in the concern, passing through the works, was struck by the remarks being made to the foreman by the not particularly striking looking visitor. Entering into conversation himself with the young man, he was so impressed by the intimate knowledge displayed of the mechanical details of the business that he exclaimed: "You are just the man I want. If you are out of a job, I will give you a first rate billet here; and, at all events, leave me your name and address in case of your being at liberty on some future occasion." "Thank you, sir, I am the Earl of Rosse, and I am not seeking employment just at present," was the characteristic reply, in Lord Rosse's usual dry, hesitating manner.—London Life.

Instantly Killed.

Martin Moss, an oiler of the steamer Mexico, lying at the foot of F street, was crushed to death Saturday morning shortly after 4 o'clock. Moss while at work oiling the engine passed by the first assistant engineer of the Mexico and the assistant engineer of the State of California, who were talking to gether, and a moment later one of them noticed that Moss had slipped into the crank pit. Before the engine, which was running very slow, had time to make a complete revolution it was stopped and the body of Moss was immediately taken out of the crank pit. On examination it was found life was extinct. The crank as it revolved struck Moss on the neck and chest with such force as to kill him instantly. The coroner was summoned and an inquest held which resulted in a verdict of accidental death.—Portland Telegram.

"I use to have at my table long-pronged forks," said a boarding house lady the other day at breakfast, "but I have them no more. You will notice that the prongs of these forks are very short ones." "And why was the change made?" asked a top-floor boarder who had just been helped for the third time to hot cakes. "Well," remarked the landlady, "I once had a bachelor in my fourth story back, at $5 a week, who could take eight buckwheat cakes at once with the big fork; I made the change to protect myself against him. Will you have another cake?" "No, thanks, I have had sufficient," was the nervous reply.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Says a Tacoma paper: It is said by one who is somewhat versed in ornithology, that there are more varieties of small birds about this city this Spring than has ever been seen here at any previous season. For several days these strange birds have been seen flying around the numerous flower gardens in the city, and seem to be quite numerous. The humming bird, too, is becoming more frequently seen than in years past. It is stated as a well-known fact, that birds migrate to places that are thickly populated, and build their nests and rear their young, more than in some remote and rural district.

H. W. Scott, who has worked hard for many years in the editorial harness of the Oregonian, intends taking a vacation, and already a prominent Vermont journalist has arrived to take his place. Election time is coming, gentle Harvey, and he does not wish to be held responsible for the many naughty things which will be said in the Oregonian in the next three months. A very cute fellow is Bro. Scott.—Jacksonville Times.

Seventeen million acres of land are held by corporations in the State of Oregon, and of this amount the W. V. & C. M. Co. holds 2,687,769, with hardly a shadow of title.
