Judge Black's Eloquence.

They tell a story of a friend of a western Congressman who happened to be at the Capitol sightseeing at the time the historic Milligan case was on trial before the supreme court. This Congressman was to make a great speech on a certain day, on some question or other, and his friend went up to the Capitol to hear it. He somehow missed his way in the building however, and wandered into the court room instead. There he saw a man of towering figure striding back and forth in a narrow space before the bench, arguing the case of the defendant, Milligan. Oratory is captivating to a western man, and he stayed to listen a few minutes. Judge Black was denouncing trials by military commissions and painting the iniquity of all the extrajudicial tribunals that ever in all history usurped the prerogatives of the duly established courts. He in-tanced Herod, who, when unable to single out from the multitude of children the Christ child, who was to be king of the Jews, tried all the babies for prospective treason, convicted them, decreed their death, and had his sentence carried out with such alacrity and zeal that in one day the whole land was filled with mourning and lamentation. He cited Nero trying the whole Christian church in a body on the charge of setting fire to Rome, and sending them to the cross. He described Macbeth's hired murderers, "the commission organized in Banquo's case, which sat upon the very night at a convenient place beside the road, where it was known he would be traveling." He pictured Lola Montez, minister and mistress of the king of Bavaria, and her "commission"—"a pack of British bulldogs, trained to tear the flesh and mangle the limbs and lap the life of blood"—and much more which I cannot accurately recall. The listener stood and drank it in with eager ears and eyes that hung on every gesture of the orator until, at the climax of the Montez instance, Judge Black thundered out:

"It gives me unspeakable pleasure to tell you this sequel. The people rose in their wrath, smashed down the whole machinery of oppression, and drove out into uttermost shame king, dogs, and trumpet—"

Then the listener rushed out of the chamber, hurried across into the hall of the house, pushed passed the doorkeeper, down the aisle to the desk where his friend was in the midst of his speech, and plucking him by the coat-tail, exclaimed in a voice so loud as to be heard a dozen seats around:

"Wind her up, Bill! Wind her up, and come over here and listen to old Jerry Black givin' 'em h—ll!"

Miss Alma Snodgrass, a young lady about 17 years of age, generally esteemed on account of the possession of amiable traits of character, was found dead last Sunday afternoon, near her home in Tygh Valley, attached to the horns of a side-saddle by her hoops. Miss Snodgrass started for Sunday school from the residence of Mr Charles Bonney, about 10 o'clock in the morning, riding an animal which was considered gentle and reliable, and was found dead at 4, having been dragged in the saddle a long distance. She was almost in a nude condition, her clothes being torn from her in shreds, and nothing remaining on her but a collar around her neck and the shoes and stockings. Her neck was broken and skull fractured, and it is supposed that death was instantaneous.

The contest over the confirmation of H F Beecher for collector of customs has made a little item of expense for the government. The number of witnesses last subpoenaed from Washington Territory is five—Messrs Burke, Kepler, Temple, Jones and Beecher. They are allowed five cents a mile each way for traveling expenses and $3 a day while at Washington. The computed distance between Port Townsend and Washington is 3280 miles. At five cents a mile each way, each witness will receive $328. This, counting allowance for expenses while at Washington, will amount in the aggregate to over $1700.—Tacoma News.

The Oregon Exhibit Car.

The Oregon Board of Immigration has determined to fit up another exhibit car and send it East, as was done last season. Mr D D Prettyman, of Salem, was selected as the most suitable person to take charge of this important work. The purpose is to fill a large car with all sorts of specimens—vegetable and mineral—with which Oregon abounds, and what it is capable of producing. This will include gold-bearing quartz, coal, iron, copper, galena, tin, timber, grains, grasses, fruits and vegetables.

Mr Prettyman's duties will be to visit every portion of the State and collect from all sources these articles; to bring them to Portland, suitably classify and arrange them in a car prepared expressly for that purpose. The work of collection will be commenced about harvest time and pushed forward as rapidly as practicable. The intention of the board is to have the start east as soon as the collection can be completed.

The car will be confined almost exclusively to the northwestern States in its travels. One short trip only will be made to the Atlantic States. Already four pressing invitations have been received by the board from the officers of as many expositions in the western States to have this exhibit car visit them when it goes east.

Bill Nye on His Birthplace.

A man ought not to criticize his birthplace, I presume, and yet if I were to do it all over again, I do not know whether I would select that very spot or not, and yet, what memories cluster about that old house. There was where I first met my parents. It was at that time that an acquaintance sprang up which has ripened in latter years into mutual respect and esteem. It was there that what might be termed a casual meeting took place that has, under the alchemy of resistless years, turned to golden links, forming a pleasant but powerful bond of union between my parents and myself. For that reason I hope that I may be spared to my parents for many years to come. There on that spot, with no inheritance but a predisposition to premature baldness a bitter hatred to rum; with no personal property but a misfit suspender and a stone bruise, began a life history which has never ceased to be a warning to people who sell groceries on credit.

News from the Railroad Front.

A gentleman just in from the railroad front says the main camps have been moved forward to Castle rock. The work is being pushed along as fast as possible. By August 1st there will not be over 90 miles of staging. The prospects for the commencement of active operation on this side of the Siskiyou, is quite favorable, but as yet there is nothing definite. Mr Voik and Mr Hurlburt have just invoiced the goods of the O. & C. R. R. Co. stored in the warehouses at Ashland. The purposes of the company in taking this invoice at this time is not known; the conjecture is that it is to see what is on hand and what further supplies and machinery is necessary to begin work on this end of the line.

A New York dispatch of July 13th has the following: Friends of Henry Villard state that he will return to this city next autumn, and that he has made satisfactory arrangements with all his creditors here; but it is not true that he is making any effort to re-establish his relations with the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company. In his correspondence he says emphatically that he will have nothing to do with any of his former enterprises.

The New York Graphic asks, very impudently it seems us, "Who wrote Hamlet?" "We have kept this secret up to this time; but for fear that somebody may be misled into supposing that Lord Bacon or W. Shakespeare wrote the play, we will say that it is one of the little things that we dashed off in those callow days before we had learned to write elegantly."—Boston Transcript.

The thermometer gains notoriety by degrees, so to speak.

The End of the World.

April 23d, Good Friday and St. George's day.

April 29th, Easter day and St. Mark's day.

June 24th, Corpus Christi and St. John's day.

In the year 1886 occurs for the first time in centuries that combination of holy days and saint's days, which Nostradamus predicted would be the sign of the "End of the World."

His prediction, made in Latin over 300 years ago, was that the end of the world would come in the year in which Good Friday came on St George's day and Easter occurred on St Mark's day and Corpus Christi occurred on St John's day. These combinations are signs, according to Nostradamus, of that great and momentous event which the Christ told His disciples to watch and pray for, His second coming in power and with great glory to establish his millennial kingdom on this earth.

Speaking of Secretary Chase reminds a newspaper man of a singular incident. One day while a clerk in his Department, I was in his room on some errand and found him laboring under strong excitement. He was talking with his bosom friend, Senator S. C. Pomeroy of Kansas, about the coming Republican Convention (of 1864) and the certainty of Lincoln's renomination. "And 1868 will be too late," he exclaimed bitterly, "for the war will be over and some soldier will be elected, sure. The soldiers are to have the honors for the next ten years. I ought to have been a soldier, Pomeroy! I felt it in my veins always, and I wanted to be a soldier—wanted to go to West Point; but they made me a lawyer, and here I am, unavailable."

I tried to back out when I saw he was in an unusual mood, but the Senator at once took his leave. I asked Mr. Pomeroy recently about this strange interview. "Yes," he said, "Mr. Chase was a great man. He overtopped his fellows. I saw him in the mind more than once."

In speaking about the most Pacific Journal on the Columbia river, at the mouth of the curried in the blow of St. Monday last. It is estimated that so far this season twenty-five or twenty-six fishermen have been drowned. Certain it is that half that number or any of them is altogether too many. The cause arises largely from the reckless competition of the fishermen in venturing out too far toward the mouth of the river. Some one casts his net in a dangerous part, makes a good haul and gets back safely. Others see this, and next day venture out, get caught in squalls or capsize and swamped by breakers and are lost. The state of Oregon and territory of Washington have a duty to perform in this behalf. Fishing should not be allowed below certain reasonable points on the river and laws to prevent such fishing should be enacted.

A fire at Kootenai, on the Northern Pacific, July 1, consumed the dwelling house of Dr. Wilbur A. Hendryx, manager of the Kootenai mining and smelting company and a storehouse belonging to that company. Loss about $8000. The Seattle Times says the igniting of some new patent stove polish that had been used to polish the stove. A sample polish with direction show to use, was thrown from the train the day before. It made a beautiful, bright polish on the cold stove, but when the fire was started for breakfast the whole stove burst into a flame which suddenly filled the room.

On Tuesday, July 13th, while some hay was being hauled in Mr Rose's livery stable, his little son, Eddie, aged 13 years, fell from the wagon, and at once showed signs of internal injury. He languished until last Friday when he died. In the morning he notified his mother that he would soon die. He was loved and respected by everybody.
