Republican Defense of the Vetocs.

While certain fatuous Republicans in congress are endeavoring to make political capital out of the president's vetoes, in other words, fooling with a buzz saw, it might be beneficial and instructive to them to read some of the representative Republican newspapers. They would learn that the most sensible element of their party recognize the soundness of the president's position, and the enormous folly of those members of Congress who have the hardihood to defend the frauds he has prevented from being consummated. The New York Commercial Advertiser, Republican, speaks as follows:

"These messages are just and timely. In each case they go to the root of the matter, exposing, in a few carefully chosen and graphic sentences, the flimmy or fraudulent character of the claim. The President has no policy of hostil ity to the pension claimant, as is shown by the fact that he has approved 565 pension bills during the session. He has vetoed ninety in all, and, probably would have vetoed a few more if he had found time to examine the bills more closely. Where he did not have time; he expressly gave the bills the benefit of the doubt.

The testimony of Harper's Weekly is no less pronounced and will carry more weight than the bombast and vaporings of all the Republican Baynes and Jacksons in Congress

"The reasons of the president's vetoes are submitted to the country, and the country will judge whether they are well founded. No honorable soldier will think him unfriendly to soldiers because he refuses to countenance dishonest claims, even when preferred in the name of a soldier; and every good citizen, conscious that the president is an honest man, and that the country is not ungenerous to the soldiers, will support him in his defense of the rights of all the people. The exercise of the veto power by President Cleveland has been neither reckless nor unjust. It has been due to a sincere desire to secure wise legislation and it has been careful, intelligent and patriotic. The more it is considered by the country the more warmly will it be commended."

Here is an unmistakeable hint to publican authority, the New York Times:

"The Republican members of the House are making a serious mistake if be made by denouncing the president's his politics defeated him. · vetoes of private pension bills. So many of these measures are obviously without merit and more attempts to ous charges of Democratic extravawho have no real claim upon the boun | called upon to face the fact that durgrounds upon which it is based.

When Republican senators and Representatives learn what public opinion is in relation to those vetoes, they will be inclined to abandon the hope of making political capital out of them. Among the multitude of fraudulent measures of this kind, on which the the last state election who received a veto ax has descended, the case of the majority of all the votes cast. A gentleman who talked with Carl feels certain that Cleveland has a tremendous hold on the American people he thought Blaine would be the next Republican candidate. He replied that, while Blaine would probably be nominated if the convention were field to-day it was not certain to happen two years hence. It was indisputable, comments made on those vetoes by he said, that a good many Republican papers were remarking the fact that the independent Republicans, who voted for Cleveland in 1884, #11 seemed to be entirely satisfied with what they did, while a good many Republicans now wish that they had voted for Cleveland. The Republicans must have a candidate who can win back the deserters if they are to triumph at the next election, and it is quite certain that Blaine is not the man to accomplish that result.
