

OREGON NEWS.

Everything of General Interest in a Condensed Form. The taxable property of Morrow county is $839,300. Junction City, Lane county, will soon have a flouring mill. The run of salmon at Alsea bay is said to be the best for many years. The electric lights at the State House and Penitentiary are in operation. Cattle are lower in Klamath county than they have been for several years. The Umatilla county poor farm was sold for $1500. It cost the county $3000. The preliminary survey for the Umpqua River Railroad was commenced last week. Hugh Metlock, a horse thief wanted in Morrow county, was captured near Pendleton. Adria Haley, of Monmouth, split his foot seriously while in the woods cutting timber. About 125,000 bushels of wheat is stored in the warehouses of the Penitentiary flouring mills. Byron Turner has gone to the penitentiary from Gilliam county, for one year for horse stealing. H. C. McFarland, of Gilliam county, had his forearm broken by a kick from a horse last week. The lumber is on the ground for the erection of the Catholic church in the city of Heppner. Pendleton, Folwell, who shot a man, was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. Wool buyers are already in the region county offering to make advances on next year's clip. A new postoffice has been established at Hale, Lane county, with George H. Hale as postmaster. Oliver Vincent, a well known and respected citizen of Jackson county, was killed in a runaway accident. John Real, a renter of F. D. Bauers' place, Ashland, lost $2000 by having a safe and contents destroyed by fire. The bounty on rabbits, wildcats and weasels cost Baker county for the past six months over $2200, mostly on rabbits. Easter Young's hop house, near Eugene, with 2400 pounds dried hops, was destroyed by fire; loss, $2000; no insurance. Wm. Farley, a 12-year-old boy of Arlington, was thrown from a horse and had both bones of his arm broken. The 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Phyl, living near the Cove, Union county, was accidentally killed by handling a loaded pistol. J. E. Houston has resigned the position of grand secretary I. O. G. T., and Prof. W. L. James has been appointed to the position. Dr. R. Trott has resigned the position of physician on the Umatilla reservation, and will return with his wife to their old home in Missouri. A sufficient amount has been subscribed toward the Agricultural College at Corvallis to enable the building association to organize and elect officers. It is not generally known what an important industry is the canning at this bay. Messrs. Harrison & Dodge are the owners. Already some 20,000 cans are put up. The wool shipped from Arlington for this season amounts to 3,500,000 pounds, which, at a low net estimate of 12 1/2 cents a pound, would bring to the country $437,500. John Backus and Charles Charlton, of Prineville, have been arrested, charged with robbing the safe of county Treasurer Bushnell several months ago of about $3000. New postoffices have been established at Heppner, Linn county, and Seep Springs, Union county, Oregon, with Sam Abasher as postmaster at the former place, and C. Aiken at the latter. The hop house of Scott Wallace, at Long Station, caught fire and burned to the ground, with the entire crop raised upon a field of seven acres, which was in the neighborhood of 1000 pounds. George Wise, a well-to-do farmer, who has resided a long time about three miles above Milwaukie, on the Oregon City road, fell from a pear tree and received injuries from which he died the next day. Dick Peebles, of Ladd canyon, while trying to escape arrest for running his horses through the streets of Union, was shot in the left arm, probably receiving amputation necessary. Officer Jones who did the shooting. The term of the circuit court at which Mattie Allison will be tried will convene in Salem, October 11. Saunier will again appear in court to receive his delayed sentence at the term which convenes in Albany, October 25. Ed. Harbin, who died last fall, or rather made his wife believe he did, was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Harshman last week at Mitchell, Crook county, for branding a horse belonging to Black Thompson. His wife has been in mourning for him for several months and now visits him in the penitentiary jail. P. O. Richards, principal of the Penitentiary schools, attempted to commit suicide. Mr. Richards had been suffering with typhoid fever and was very weak, but was not thought dangerously ill. He was left alone for a minute or two by his attendants, when he took a knife lying on the stand near by and plunged it in both sides of his chest. He is a man most highly respected in that place and at last secured his chances for recovery were favorable.

THE DUDE AVENGED.

Quest Antics of a Brand New Nickel-Plated, Lightning-Greased Bicycle. I always did despise a dude, and when I saw one glide swiftly by on his magnificent nickel bicycle, I made up my mind that any one could master the art without previous preparation. Immediately proceeding to put my theory to test I selected the public road for my experiment. Expecting to take quite a long journey I filled my pockets with crackers and cheese for refreshments by the way. Placing my foot on the machine I hopped along what I considered was a proper distance, and then made a spring for the saddle. My aim was not true. I miscalculated the distance by about a foot, and I lighted upon the fore-part of the saddle with my knees well braced against the handles. The commotion that followed could not have been greater if I had touched off Hell Gate with a parlor match. I immediately discovered that this particular bicycle had never been broken to saddle. I wasn't clear but I had mounted a circular saw under full headway. I started to fall about three minutes before eleven o'clock, and I noticed afterward that my watch had stopped two minutes after that hour. I threw myself back, but the bicycle met me half way, totally disregarding the injunction to "never kick a man when he's going down hill." It was plainly to be seen that it had taken the bit in its teeth. It wobbled from side to side to get me off my guard; then the pedals played "shiny" with my legs. I had shut my eyes after the first jump, and was vainly trying to touch bottom with my feet, but I was beyond my depth. The suspense between the time I began to fall and the time I arrived at a permanent location, caused me to lose ten pounds. It was a short spell of sickness, but my constitution suffered terribly. I wasn't hungry, and kind o' wished I hadn't taken provisions for so long a journey. I wanted to go home, but the bicycle couldn't spare me. I tried my old game of smiling to regain my composure. I didn't smile exactly in the middle, and the machine began to career toward the left. I instantly shifted my piece of chewing gum to the right side of my mouth, but that was too much ballast on that side. The small wheel kicked up a little rattle here just to let me know it was still with me and didn't want any foolishness. I was in the enemy's country and was completely surrounded. The ice wagon went by and I tried to call for help. I didn't have breath enough left to swear. In my efforts to keep on both sides of the perpendicular at once, I had twisted the head of my collar button off. The temperature had risen seven degrees the first two minutes after I cut loose from Mother Earth, and I could hear the cheese in my pockets beginning to fry. All was life and motion and the bicycle was very nervous. I was afraid the hand might strike up and make matters worse. I felt that my seat was contested and that I must soon "go to the country." From the topmost curve of one of the bicycle's springs I caught a bird's-eye view of outlying counties, and I panted for a change of air and scenery. Why didn't some one throw me a rope. No one went for a doctor; I suppose because they considered the case hopeless. I was conscious that I was the great central attraction, but painfully realized that I spread over too much ground to exhibit under one canvass. Slowly the minutes wore on but I wasn't losing any time. I had a certain amount of work to do before I struck the ground. There was a diversity of opinion as to what I was trying to accomplish. Some thought I was boring for an artesian well, while others thought it was a scene from a Dakota blizzard. I now became aware through every fiber of the bicycle's steel anatomy that it was gathering up its forces for one final grand act of extermination. I wished I had been a little more regular in my attendance at Sunday-school, then looked for a fire escape, but it had no such attachment. Concentrating all its inherent wickedness into one mighty boost, intimating that it had no further use for me, I took the hint, left the saddle and winged my way toward the azure. I had a round-trip ticket and came back on the down grade with all the gathered force of my past five minutes' exercise. Scoping out a ditch along the roadside with my shoulder led a bystander to remark that I was working out my road tax. When I got to the end of the furrow the large wheel rolled over me, the smaller wheel turned a hand-spring over the larger one and knocked my hat over my eyes; then the entire machine laid down on me, while the dude with the placid countenance and unruffled brow rolled silently by.—Sober Sam, in Peck's Sun.

The Paper Tree of Tonkin.

The principal material used in the manufacture of paper used in Tonkin is the paper tree, which grows in abundance on the mountains in the environs of Sontay. The dried bark is macerated and then rubbed up in mortars, so as to reduce it to a fine pulp, the latter being extended with a certain quantity of water, in order to form a clear paste which is sized with an infusion made from the shavings of the gomao tree. The paper is manufactured sheet by sheet, by means of delicate bamboo screens, which the operators alternately dip into the paste and take out therewith a thin sheet of paper, which is deposited upon a board. At the end of the day these sheets are put into a press in order to extract the moisture from them and are then dried by placing them, one by one, upon a hot masonry wall, after which they are put up in packages and trimmed. Each operative makes a thousand sheets a day. The thickness of the paper depends on the consistency of the paste, and at one establishment as many as 80,000 sheets are capable of being produced daily.—N. Y. Sun.

"Mamma," said Tato, "I have finished my cake and Gustave has got all of his left yet. Don't you think, mamma, you ought to tell him to give me half of it to teach him to be generous?"—French Paper.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—There are now thirty-seven women in the Universalist ministry. —Cincinnati boasts that it has the largest number of churches in the world. —Jewish citizens in Las Vegas, N. M., are erecting the first synagogue in New Mexico. —A colored normal State school to cost ten thousand dollars will be located at Louisville, Ky. —Evening high schools are now provided for cities of fifty thousand or more inhabitants in Massachusetts.—Boston Journal. —The Christian Union says "this is the whole of righteousness—to be unselfish, to obey reason, and to love beauty." —The Royal Academy of Belgium offers a prize of five thousand dollars for the ablest paper on treatment of nervous diseases, especially with a view for a remedy for epilepsy. —Half a century ago in Turkey it was considered a shame for a woman to read. To-day two schools for girls in Constantinople have been established by the Sultan himself. —The income of Yale during the just college year was $187,540, with expenses aggregating $167,335. The total bequests to all the departments exceed $1,600,000. —A remarkable record of promptitude is that of Miss Annie Louise Goodrich of the classical course Nashua (N. Y.) high school, class of '86, who was neither absent nor tardy for nine consecutive years. —The cost per child in average attendance for the State schools in the principal Australian colonies, and for the Board schools in England and Wales, is as follows: Total cost per child of the average attendance in the State schools in New South Wales £5 12s. 1d.; ditto ditto in Victoria £5 2s. 2d.; ditto ditto in South Australia £5 7s.; ditto ditto in Queensland £5 7s. 8d.; Board schools in England and Wales £4 10s. 1d. —The lines of one member of the Salvation Army have at least fallen in pleasant places. One of the brightest and prettiest having gone to Plymouth to convert the town, met with such success as a preacher that, at the suggestion of two prominent citizens, she has been induced to leave the army and to establish herself as an independent minister in a church of her own. A gentleman who offered to escort her home was rather taken aback with the response: "I have come to Plymouth to catch souls, not beaux."—Boston Gazette. —In a letter from Mr. Moody, dated at Northfield, Mass., to his Bible class in the Chicago Avenue Church, Chicago, which recently celebrated its twenty-first birthday, he says: "I have had a roving commission, and gone to my audiences. You have been stationed in the fort, and your audiences have come to you. The battle is the same; let us push it to the gates. Whatever else I forgot, the early events of the old Illinois Street school will never pass from my mind, and I love to think of your class as a tie that binds me to the past. Many things which you have done will come to naught, and you will look back upon them with no pleasure, but the work you have put into the Master's vineyard will stand."—Chicago Journal.

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

"Why don't our young men come to the front?" asks the Associate. Well, we don't know what keeps them back, unless it is the high price of the reserved seats.—Burdette. —Counsel for the defense: "Gentlemen of the jury, if there ever was a case which, more than any other case, challenged careful comparison with similar cases, this case is that case."—Fliegende Blätter. —A bug, with a sufficiently vitiated taste to attack the New Jersey onion crop, has made its debut. This is almost as bad as if it had taken to smoking cigarettes.—Norristown Herald. —Bridget (to teeman)—"Av yo please, sir, me missus x will yez put the ice in the saucer here ivery mornin' and cover it wid the taycup, so we can have some left if we don't get there the minit ye lave it." —Things One Would Rather Have Left Unsaid.—Jones (to hostess, famed for her dinners)—"O", by the way, Mrs. Hodgkinson, if you should happen to want a really good cook, I know of one who would suit you to a T!"—Punch. —Summer Boarder.—"You have a remarkably fine lot of chickens, I see." Farmer—"Yes, and Mr. Spinx, you may not believe it, but those chickens seldom die. Why, whenever we want one to eat we generally have to go out and kill it."—Vid. Illus. —It was at a dinner table. His father was saying something to his mother about dynamite. "O," exclaimed Jack, looking across to Eloise with an evident desire to impress her with his requirements, "I know what dynamite is." "What is it?" inquired Eloise. "It's something that you blasphemers rocks with," Jack explained. —"Young man," said a stern old professor to a student who had been charged with kissing one of his daughters—"young man, don't get into that habit. You'll find that kissing is like eating soup with a fork." "How so, sir?" asked the student. "Because," answered the stern old professor, "you can't get enough of it." —Mrs. Flanagan (formerly McFlanagan)—"Isn't it at Venice, my dear, that we are to see the Lion of St. Mark?" Mr. Flanagan—"I believe it is." Mrs. Flanagan (who has somewhere seen the words Doge of Venice in print)—"And we mustn't forget the celebrated Dog of Venice. The children will want to see all of the animals."—N. Y. Times. —"Where'm I goin' this vacation, pop?" inquired Jimmy Tuffboy of his paternal. "Well, you are going to behave yourself to start with." "That's a tough one, pop. Where then?" "I guess if you go to the picnic that will do you." "One picnic! No picnic for me. I'm going to tramp these woods round here for six straight weeks. Who wants to row a boatload o' girls all over a pond an' not have 'em speak to you on the street?"—Hartford Post.

In the workshop it is frequently handy to have some metal that will expand in cooling to fill small holes, defects in castings, etc. An alloy for this purpose can be made of nine parts of lead, two parts of antimony and one part of bismuth. TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR For all Diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Spleen. This purely vegetable preparation, now so celebrated as a Family Medicine, originated in the South in 1828. It acts gently on the Bowels and Kidneys and corrects the action of the Liver, and is, therefore, the best preparatory medicine, whatever the sickness may prove to be. In all common diseases it will, unassisted by any other medicine, effect a speedy cure. The Regulator is safe to administer in any condition of the system, and under no circumstances do harm. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is so intoxicatingly beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted. No loss of time, no interruption or stoppage of business while taking the Regulator. Children complaining of Colic, Headache, or Sick Stomach, a teaspoonful or more will give relief. If taken occasionally by patients exposed to MALARIA, will expel the poison and protect them from attack. A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION. I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons' Liver Regulator, promptly and effectually move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system.
