Information Regarding Oregon.

A traveling correspondent for an Oregon paper, while in the East, writes a word in regard to Oregon: "In our three trips across the continent within the past six months, we find of all states in the Union, Oregon is the least known, the least advertised and the least spoken of, and it is embarrassing sometimes to be in conversation with parties and some one ask: 'How far is Oregon from St. Paul?' 'Is Oregon in California?' 'Is the Columbia river Oregon?' 'Are there any churches or schoolhouses in your country?' Has Sitting Bull made any more raids lately? 'How do you protect yourselves against the Indians?' etc., etc. One feels that he is living in a foreign land, instead of under the protection of the stars and stripes. Within the past six months the writer has been asked at least one thousand questions such as quoted. One young man asked the writer, a few days since: 'Do you see the same moon and stars in Oregon that we do here?' One newspaper in New York published an item that a man drove from Washington Territory to Elmira, N. Y., in forty days with one span of mules, making fifty miles a day for thirty days, and seventy-five miles a day for ten days. Such ignorances in regard to the distance between Elmira, N. Y., and Washington Territory, ought to be shown by some one other than the editor of a newspaper having a circulation of 10,000 copies. The citizens of Oregon who desire to have our fair State known away from home, should take steps at once to inform the world of her boundless resources. While at home one imagines that the Westfoot State is known far and near, but let him step beyond the shadow of the State line and he will meet the man who is not familiar with Oregon as she is."

It is told of Gambetta that once, in the hey-day of his power, when he went to some agricultural department to visit a reactionary candidate in favor of one of his friends, he inquired about the agriculturist's wants. "We are sadly in need of rain," came the answer. "I'll see about it when I get to Paris," promised Gambetta. And his listeners believed in his promise. The record runs that the rain came down in torrents a day or two after, and that when the reactionary candidate presented himself he was hooted at. "Let your party do as much for us as Gambetta, and we will elect you," they said.

The magnitude of the oleomargarine business was not overstated by the dairymen of the United States in their plea for Congressional protection, as appears from a list published in the Chicago Herald of the 6th inst., of those who during the first five days of the month took out license, under the new law for the manufacture of this oleaginous compound. No less than three hundred and twenty-five individuals and firms took out license for such manufacture in five days, in Chicago alone. Armour & Co., of slaughtering and packing fauna, head the list, giving the public an insight into the matter of what becomes of their refuse grease.

THE PRETTIEST LADY in Oregu was asked what made her complexion so clear and beautiful. She said it was by using Gilmore's Aromatic Wine, at Osburn and Co.'s.
ONE OF THE MOST NOTED European physicians said: "Neuralgia was the forerunner of a diseased nerve for healthy blood. Use Gilmore's Aromatic Wine for the blood."
MRS. L. LOOMIS, of Ellis, N. Y., writes us that she was sick for six months, was in bed two days in Osburn and Co.'s drug store, and found relief in Gilmore's Aromatic Wine, four bottles cured her. At Osburn and Co.'s.
REV. W. FISKE BEQUA, of Pavillion, N. Y., says: "I have used Gilmore's Aromatic Wine and find it an excellent household remedy that none ought to do without."
REV. HARRIS PECK, of Pavillion, N. Y., says: "I was troubled with Malaria, Bowel Difficulty and sleepless nights which I found relief in Gilmore's Aromatic Wine, a positive cure. I feel better than I have in years. I will and otherwise feeling like a new man. I cheerfully recommend it to suffering humanity. For sale by Osburn and Co., Eugene."
REV. M. DERRY, of London, N. Y., says: "The Gilmore's Aromatic Wine proved a great blessing to my wife." At Osburn and Co.'s.

Bill Nye's Falling Health.
 [From the Chicago News.]
 With sincere regret we hear of the failing health of Mr. Bill Nye, the popular humorist. Mr. Nye had a serious illness three years ago while he was still a resident of Wyoming; it was in the hope that a change of climate would restore him to his old time vigor that he removed to Wisconsin. The change did seem to help him for awhile; perhaps if he had remained in the quiet of his pretty Hudson home our bright and lovable friend might now be as robust and hearty as he ever was. But Bill Nye is a busy man and a conscientious man; he has deemed it his duty to improve every opportunity to provide for his family and himself against the rainy days—and there have been many rainy days in Bill Nye's life—who among the rest of us poor devils does not understand it all. So Bill Nye has worked hard and patiently—many times when he was ill of body and sick of heart; yet out of his pain has come much good, as will testify all of us who have been so thoroughly warmed by his delicious humor. Within the last year Mr. Nye has been almost constantly engaged lecturing, and this employment has taken him into all parts of the country in every kind of weather, necessitating exposure and all those irregularities which surely impair the health. The result seems to be that the genial humorist's physical condition is quite as alarming as it was three years ago when he came from the far West with the poisons of malaria in his veins. Mr. Nye tells us that unless some change for the better sets in very soon he will be compelled to abandon all work for an indefinite period.

Colonel William R. Morrison in Waterloo, Ills., Nov. 4th, in response to inquiries as to the causes of his defeat, said that Jarrett, the tin-plate emissary of Pennsylvania, and other protectionists professing to represent the Knights of Labor and other labor interest were in the district ten or more days, just before election, hiring and bribing such as could be hired and bribed, and continued to consolidate in the Baker interest most of the labor element. In proof of such hiring and bribery we have Jarrett's letters. Mr. Hewitt's interview, as telegraphed to the Post Dispatch, falsely representing me as standing in the way of tariff reductions, facilitated Jarrett's mission of bribery in the interest of the Protectionists. But it is alright. The blood of the martyrs is still the seed of the Church. To the question whether the result was a surprise, Col. Morrison said: "I recognized the influences that were at work. As I went through the district I received a good deal of information as to what was going on. Heretofore I have had my share of the labor vote of the district. This time it was handled as I have indicated." Col. Morrison does not entertain the idea that the cause of tariff reform has received a set back by reason of his defeat.

A newspaper has been started at Steubenville, Montana, and the following are specimen paragraphs from the first issue: We make our debut today, and at the same time launch the Montana Democrat out upon the broad domain of paperdom. It is the only Democratic paper published in Western Montana. When we cease to be an advocate and the exponent of Democratic principles you can copper the queen and begin to look upwards towards Mary's Peak for Father Gabriel. It will be our aim and desire to labor hard and faithfully for the grand old party, and in doing so, we do not expect to stir the Western hemisphere on fire with our intellectual friction, because that kind of friction is not red-headed in our genealogy. Bring out the shot gun, take down the cowhide from its receptacle, chloroform the festive politician, and carry the news to everybody that we are here. We want the hired henchman of the ring gang to note the stubborn fact."

According to figures published by the treasury department, there existed in this country on the last day of June 58,420,000 people—an increase of 8,250,000 for the last six years.

Charged With Murder.

In our last issue we gave details of the revolting murder of D. I. Corker, the hardware merchant of Lafayette, and that the Coroner was busy preparing for an inquisition, thorough and searching. Since that time two arrests have been made, one being Gus Marple, a young man formerly employed by Meisner Bros. in their livery stable at Portland. He was arrested for annoying a Chinese camp in company with a pal. Upon searching Marple a knife was found which tallied with the impressions made in the putty by a knife used in removing a pane of glass from the window where entrance was gained. Upon Marple's clothing a large number of blood spots were found, but it was claimed these spots were made while carrying the head of a hog to his home. During his examination he was nervous, yet any man would be nervous if arrested on such a charge. His pal Eastman may know something of the foul crime, and no stone will be left unturned to bring the guilty to justice. The report that Marple had jewelry on his person belonging to the murdered courtesan, Emma Merlotin, of Portland, was without foundation. The murdered woman lost no jewelry, but $600 she had drawn from the bank the day she was murdered, with which she bought Christmas presents for friends at home, was stolen. During the present carnival of crime all sorts of reports are set afloat, and many of them are mere inventions.

James E. Murdoch, says that on the night that President Lincoln issued his first call for troops he was playing in Milwaukee, when a noise in the audience caused him to stop rendering Hamlet's gloomy lines. A man sprang upon the stage and read Lincoln's call. The play was never finished, but Mr. Murdoch, in the garb of Hamlet, stood by the side of Matt Carpenter and made a speech for the Union. Next day he packed up his wardrobe and never reopened his trunk until the war was over.

The total collections of internal revenue from the time the present system was organized, July 1, 1862, up to June 30, 1886, were $3,438,290,265, says a Washington dispatch. The aggregate receipts from internal revenue, remarked an officer of the treasury to-day, "were sufficient to have paid the entire public debt at its highest figure, $2,756,431,371, and leave a balance of $681,858,884, if they had been applied to that purpose."

Gov. Moody, in view of repressing crime and securing the conviction of persons transgressing the laws, has issued a proclamation offering a reward subject to the approval of the legislature, of $500 each to be paid upon the conviction of any one not yet apprehended or convicted of the murder of either Thomas Kenely, murdered in Portland, Roderick Grant in Wasco county, or D. J. Corker in Yamhill county.

Some papers published at the East are talking about Henry George's future prospects for the Presidency of the United States. As Mr. George was born in England and did not arrive in the United States until after he had reached his sixth year, we don't think he is likely to prove formidable as a presidential aspirant. He will find the constitution of the United States a serious obstacle to his vaulting ambition.

The San Francisco Bulletin, studying the poll lists, finds that of the citizens of San Francisco not born in California 2500 are from the South, 571 from the New England states, and 10,196 from the Middle and Western states and territories, which makes total of 18,531 native voters against 25,276 foreign voters. But California comes in with 6366 native voters of her own which brings up the total native to 24,886.

Settlers took up last year 7,412.8 acres of land under the homestead law. It must be a lazy man who has no home in a country where he can earn his living.

A well written advertisement in a paper is worth a cart load of circulars and fence dodgers.
