

It has often been said that John Jacob Astor was, sixty years ago, the only citizen of America worth $1,000,000. He may have been the only New Yorker then possessed of such a fortune, but the wealth of Stephen Girard, of Philadelphia, would at that time have reached at least $6,000,000. He died in 1831, leaving an estate valued at $9,000,000, and Astor in 1848, leaving an estate of $20,000,000, much of it having been accumulated within fifteen or twenty years.—Ex.

He said that he had to get out of his dark cell.

Bill Nye has written another book. He says it is the best of all, being longer, wider and purer. The fastidious need not be afraid to read this as he has had two rapid expurgators from the East to expunge everything that could harrow up the feelings or provoke the flow of anguish of anyone.

The friend and lover of bogus butter will get some information by consulting the license which the new Federal law exacts from the manufacturers of oleomargarine. In Chicago fifteen licenses have already been granted. They set forth that the stuff is to be made of the horns, hoofs, tallow, suet, hides and glands of cattle.

It seems that Cleveland cannot dismiss an office-holder who abuses him in public speeches, without the Blaine organs show their teeth. The merchant who would not discharge an employee who maligned him, would by the same papers, be called a fool.—Ex.
