A Terrible Storm at Sea.
 Saturday's Astorian says: Chas. Hornung, head keeper at Tillamook rock light house, came up on the Manzanita yesterday. He reports stormy weather at the rock. The month of November was remarkable fine, but with December came terrible weather from the south-east, culminating in a severity unequalled in his four years experience. On the 16th the sea rose in solid masses of water carrying away the heavy water tanks situated 90 feet above the sea. Later on it grew still rougher, and a wall of water broke against the rock and rose far above striking the light, which is 143 feet in height, and falling solidly on the roof. Tons of water flew up in the air and fell with a crash as of a hundred hammers again and again on the roof of the lighthouse. It cracked, the joint crushing in admitting the water. The light trembled and the stout iron stanchions bent with the force of the blows. For about a quarter of an hour it looked mighty scary. Everything was afloat, tables, chairs, etc., swimming about, the water thundering on the roof and pouring in torrents through the rents its weight had made, and it seemed as though the end of all things had come, as far as Tillamook rock light was concerned, when, suddenly, at the very height of the fury of the storm, the force of the waves abated, greatly to the relief of the keeper and his assistants, who essayed to repair the damages. The next day the surface of the ocean was as calm and smiling as the placid bosom of a sunlit lake.

THE O. AND C. RAILROAD.
 The Line to be Completed by the First of July—How the Work is Progressing.

Owing to the unusual mild weather prevailing at this season throughout the Pacific slope, and the absence of frost and snow in the Shasta valley and adjoining country, the extension of work on the portion of the Oregon & California railroad line now under construction is progressing with a speed and with a vigor that is very little interrupted by winter conditions. The track laying is finished to Edson, 17 miles southwest of Yreka, and the grading is being pushed forward on the portions of the new line where it is free from "adobe" soil. A force of several hundred Chinese graders are at work on the cuttings within three miles south of the upper ferry of the Klamath river, and blasting of rock is continuous in that vicinity. The building of the bridge across the Klamath is not yet commenced, but Mr. Scoble, the contractor for the stone mason work, is engaged in the preparation of the necessary material. The river is somewhat narrow at this portion of its course, and, although the current is impetuous, the structure will not be of very large size and consequently a comparatively short period will suffice for its construction. This bridge will be the only one of any considerable size in all the 67 miles of the track yet to be laid, but trestle works will necessarily be numerous along the greater part of this distance—especially from the east end of the Shasta valley to Ashland, about 40 miles, as this portion of the route is very hilly and broken up by water-courses and gulches. At last accounts the boring of the tunnel through the Siskiyou range was temporarily suspended, but this gigantic work will be finished by the time that the grading reaches it, and no delay will be caused by this part of the construction. All work on this line, from its southern terminus to the temporary terminus at Edson, is of the most substantial kind, and it is a noteworthy fact that the mason work employed is more abundant on this line than any other in the United States, while the appearance of durability is of the most substantial kind. Every culvert has either stone facings or stone arches, and all bridges have either stone piers or stone foundations, according to the needs of the structures.

The portion of the line above Delta is only recently constructed, and the embankments and slopes of the cuttings being new and not yet solidly settled, are still subject to land slides in wet weather, but one or two seasons will entirely remedy this unavoidable defect, and render those slopes and banks permanently fixed. Through the upper portion of the Sacramento river canyon, where the track is laid, the bed is of solid rock and the sides are chiefly of the same adamantine material. Consequently the portions of the line subject to land slides are limited in number and are also restricted in area. During the present Winter there has been no frost to speak of in the Sacramento canyon, but the weather has been unusually wet, and consequently land slides of small size have been numerous, necessitating vexatious delays in the trains and involving stoppages over night on the upper part of the line. These stoppages have caused the irregularities in communication since the middle of December, but the present season will probably end all causes of this nature. As the track leaves Sacramento canyon it ascends steep grade and crosses several very high and long trestles to McCloud, which station is yet the point at which heavy freight is delivered and taken further by teams. Passengers go fourteen miles further to Butteville, and the construction train goes with supplies another ten miles to Edson—this latter portion of the line not having yet been accepted by the government. It is estimated, by those best informed, that the whole extension through to Ashland will be finished by the 1st of July next, and when it is considered that this line has been made through the mountains at an average cost of about $80,000 per mile, the magnitude of the undertaking may be imaged. When finished and in full working order, the Oregon & California railroad will doubtless develop a wonderful increase in Oregon commerce and give a stimulus to travel in this district that in extent can only yet be conjectured.

The German Way.
 The Prussian government has commenced a vigorous crusade against patent medicines by appointing eminent experts to carefully analyze all such medicaments, and to publish their ingredients and the effects of them on the human system. The following is one of their reports made public through the Police Department of Berlin:

An official analysis of the "Tooth Renovator" prepared by Richard Mohrmann, residing at No. 8 Voigt platz, Berlin, proves that the same is composed of peppermint oil and soda. This preparation does not preserve the teeth. On the contrary it destroys them. As a warning to the public this result is published.

(Signed) FRIEHELM, Acting Royal Police President, Berlin.
 Another preparation called the "Swagatin toothache paste," priced fifteen cents per box, contained nothing but water and borax, which material cost the manufacturer one-eighth of a cent per box.

To the credit of the experts it must be said that whenever they find a remedy of sufficient merit to warrant commendation, they publish it as frankly as they fearlessly expose the frauds. What a shivering there would be among the bottles and boxes in this country should such a system of expert analysis be adopted by our government.

In a recent discourse Rev. I. D. Driver, of East Portland, speaking of a virtuous course of life being open to all men, said: "But few can be rich, and fewer still can be wise, but all can be good and right. Col. Ingersoll, on the labor question, recently said: 'Five men worked in a shoe store; each made 75 cents per day more than expenses. One spent his evenings with a respectable family in social converse with their pretty daughter; the other four in a saloon. In two or three years the one saved up enough to buy a nice little home and got married. In two or three years more he could hire a horse and buggy and take his wife out riding. The other four went to a saloon and passed resolutions that there was a conflict between labor and capital.' This is a fair statement of principles involved even on a higher plane and runs thus. Col. Ingersoll and four others, advocate temperance and morality; one of them practices what he teaches, and builds up a character that is solid and pure. Col. Ingersoll and the other three gratify themselves, get drunk, and by a violation of their own teachings, are self-condemned. In process of time all five die, the one who by self-denial and the conscientious practice of what he believed and taught, is qualified for the association of the pure and good spiritual home. Col. Ingersoll and the other three go to hell and pass resolutions that there is conflict between justice and grace."—Oregonian.

The Spokane county grand jury found a true bill of murder in the second degree against Ray Raymond, for the killing of a man in her bagnio in Spokane Falls last spring. It is said that it was a cold-blooded murder, and that the grand jury would have found a bill accordingly but for the fact that the most prominent men in the Falls would have been called on as witnesses in the case, they being in the house at the time, as was also some of the grand jurors.

The man who framed the original Legal Tender act is still living. His name is E. G. Spaulding, of Buffalo. He is nearly eighty years of age. At the breaking out of the war, he was a leading member of the lower house of Congress. His famous bill, known as the Legal Tender act, was slightly altered before its introduction by Secretary Chase and Mr. Lincoln. The original bill is now in the possession of its author. Mr. Spaulding is a bank President and is worth $10,000,000.

The Portland postoffice sold $80,000 worth of postage stamps last year.
