Mr. R. R. Giller from Yale college visited the University Wednesday morning. He lives in Portland. Time to pack your trunks for home, sweet home. So get your luggage and your mate and don't forget your certificate.

The Entusias had no debate on Friday as it was the last meeting and there was other business to occupy its members. Ill health is prevalent on the day of rhetoricians. The last one seems to have been very enjoyable for the artists of the school.

The Laurean editor leaves just in the time of danger, and Clyde Johnston refuses to settle his account; that is, in the athletic line. Prof. Hawthorne has given for the subject of composition to be written on next Fall, "Fragments." To be gathered during vacation.

The faculty had a special meeting at two o'clock, Tuesday, asking all students who had gone on the excursion to Roseburg to be present. Many a sub-freshman wishes to be a junior this week. It is not for the glory and name of this class, but because there is leisure in it.

If any of this year's graduates who are so popular to talk about, expect to be lawyers it is advisable to review the lower courts and learn how many there are. The seniors are not seen this week. They are only heard. Prof. Still has them under her charge practicing for the great day. Their voices are heard afar off.

Some of the students went on the excursion to Roseburg and two remained for a visit. Mr. Brattain and Robert Johnson, they being seniors expect to enjoy their vacation. The seniors have asked the faculty to change the time of planting the class tree from ten o'clock in the forenoon to 2 o'clock in afternoon. The change has been made.

Quite a number are afraid to report items for fear the Ed. will turn the items on them. Sorry, but if you refuse to give any they will have to be made. My experience is that some editors are not very truthful. The compositions read at rhetoricals last Friday were above the average. Particularly those under the subject, "Should Church Property be Taxed?" It was handled well by those thinking it should be, because they discussed it as the composition lesson it was under had taught.

Miss Loyola O'Connor a former student and known to many places in the Willamette valley, has been studying in the dramatic profession in the East. She is now at home and will this week appear at New Market Theatre in Portland in the Frederick Ward company. She is well spoken of by this company.

The mirrors it is hoped will be well taken care of during the Summer and resurcoted next Fall with a polished surface.

It is hoped that both societies will turn out to their lecture Tuesday morning. Last year there were only a few in attendance. It is not any more trouble to come to a lecture at this time than to school and is the very best time of the day to appreciate the lecture.

Personal. Mr. Peter Kuey is in town. Bob Lane has again moved to Eugene. Mr. P. H. Mattingly, of Roseburg, is in town. Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Gray visited Salem this week.

Mr. J. M. Shelly spent last Sunday in Eugene. Dr. C. Hayden, the dentist, has returned to Salem. Mr. Frank Belshaw went to Portland last Wednesday. Prof. Arnold left for his home in Pendleton last Tuesday.
