While Samuel G. Reed, a deserter from the army, was being led from the workhouse to undergo trial by court-martial, he broke away from the guards and fled. The guards sent a volley after him, and he fell mortally wounded. Reed has a remarkable story. He is believed to have committed half a dozen murders. A few years ago he and another deserter killed a rich Jew named Block, at Matamoros. The murderers secured $10,000. Reed comes of a good family in Montgomery, Ala.

A suit for damages has been instituted under the civil rights bill against the Central Railroad, at Atlanta, Ga. The complainant is a white man, Col. N. Hale, of Henry county, who is aggrieved because he is not allowed to ride in the "Jim Crow" car, as the coach set aside for negroes is called. He claimed his ticket allowed him to ride anywhere on the train. The conductor did not take this view of the case and had Colonel Hale ejected from the train, and for this injury Hale claims $2,500 damages.

Twenty-five masked men, belonging to a band of regulators and known as the "Knights of the Switch," rode up to the house of a family named Lynch, living near Corydon, Indiana, and taking Mrs. Lynch and her daughter into the yard stripped them to the skin and whipped them with whips until they fainted in pain. Mrs. Lynch was about to become a mother. It is feared she will die from the effects of the severe whipping. The women bore a bad reputation. The "Knights" are the same ones who committed numerous similar outrages some months ago.

Police Captain Williams, of New York City, received an infernal machine by express and barely escaped the results of an explosion by dropping it into a bucket of water, when the machinery in it began to work. Another dynamite machine, intricate in construction, was given by an unknown man to an expressman in Jersey City to deliver to Inspector Byrnes, but the expressman took it to police headquarters, where it was carefully examined without causing an explosion. It is not known whether both machines came from the same source or not.

Sullivan, president; B. Thomas, vice president; A. C. Smith, secretary; P. S. Courtney and George Ferguson to act with the president, vice president and secretary as an executive committee. Another terrible runaway accident occurred at Jacksonville, in which Wm. Eaton, street commissioner, was seriously if not fatally injured. His team ran away, throwing all the occupants over an embankment and the wheels passing over Eaton, breaking his jaw bone and crushing his head. It was only a few months ago that he was thrown from his wagon and had his leg broken, and was just getting well, only to meet with this last one. The past few weeks have a large record for accidents and runaways. One man and a small boy were kicked by horses and died from their injuries, and at least half a dozen persons have been crippled and badly bruised by runaways during that time.

Says the Brandon Recorder: About forty Italian coal miners were brought up by the steamer to work in the Newport mines. The Arcata, which is expected soon, it is thought will bring up quite a lot more of miners, as it takes at least 100 to run the mines. The company notified the old miners some days ago to vacate the houses occupied by them, which will result in much hardship to some who are out of funds, and particularly will it be hard on those widows whose late husbands had gone up to Nanaimo, only to be in time to be killed in the explosion there. The latter are entitled to some of the large fund that has been raised on the coast for the relief of the sufferers from the great disaster.

The severity of the old man's sentence is owing to the fact that he led his son into the scheme to draw a man into ambush and rob him. They succeeded in obtaining only seventy-five cents from their victim.

FASHIONS OF THE DAY.

Suggestions for Ladies Who Desire to Wear None But Stylish Garments.

Pattern dresses in woolens are very stylish and generally popular and are in great variety.

Plain skirts will be the rule the coming season, with very long and full draperies in the overdress.

Colored Brussels net still takes the place of white ruchings for neck and sleeves of dressy costumes.

Herring-bone camel-hair fabrics are soft and pliable, and in all the desirable shades, both dark and light.

Gauze sashes with colored ends are worn gracefully arranged with a light evening toilet of China silk.

Heelless slippers of scarlet velvet are the latest for house wear, and offer great temptations for kicking them off.

Palm leaves form a very elegant and favorite design in trimming this season, both in braid and passementerie.

Several small combs are worn in the hair instead of one good sized one, and they are tucked in apparently at random.

All the new spring models have the effect of being "made-over" costumes, as they are composed of two distinct fabrics.

Parisian buttons out-button any buttons seen here for many a day, and are of the most elegant and elaborate description.

Skirtings of bayadere stripes are particularly stylish this season. They come in beautiful Persian colors, rich and deep.

Frise stripes, with plain fabric between, are seen in some light shades, and will lighten a plain cloth suit very successfully.

The satin striped gossamer silks are to be worn by bridesmaids the coming season, and these silks are found in all delicate shades.

The cotton frise cloths, so very stylish last season, are to be seen again this year among the new goods. Stripes are very stylish.

Japanese idols and curios of all sorts are used for the ornamenting of umbrellas and dog-whips carried by "sporty" young ladies.

Silk and wool frise goods, when of rich quality, are very much used in the new models for walking dresses for spring wear.

White wolf skins are in demand for rugs and mats for the boudoir, which must now be as nearly as it may be dressed in virgin white.

Bonnet pins are growing more and more elaborate every day, and now are set with real stones of value, such as diamonds, pearls and opals.

Geneva point is a lace which will be much used the coming season on washable dresses, as it is very durable and at the same time attractive.

Some of the tinsel ribbons are of tawdry effect when seen in the shops, but make very pretty trimming for light fabrics, such as chambray.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

NEW DRESS MATERIALS.

Scotch Gingham, Satteens, Lawns, Muslins, Tennis Cloth and Silks.

The cotton dresses being prepared in advance of the season for summer wear are mostly Scotch gingham, satteens, lawns and muslins trimmed with embroidery. The striped gingham are in great favor, primrose and heliotrope stripes alternating, or else white and lavender stripes; also two shades of blue or pink with brown, or lavender, white and brown, in fact, any combination in stripes can be had, but lavender is one of the predominating ones. Pretty white gingham with bars or stripes of color wide apart are shown; a very stylish pattern in white with brown bars, open-striped Hamburg is in stock.

Velvet is used for their trimming, forming round shawl collars, and also deep close-fitting cuffs. Plaid and striped satteens are used for the skirt and drapery, while the basque is of plain satteen. This is pretty in heliotrope grounds with pompadour designs, or in pale gray, or China blue, with flower designs for the skirt and a plain blue or gray basque. Dark blue and brown remain favorite colors in these dressy cottons. A very popular satteen is a pretty shade of blue, neither dark nor very light, but a very handsome shade of blue with rose pink rings all over it. The satteens are mostly dark ground work, with light designs whatever the pattern—leaves, bunch of roses, buds, carnations, etc.

If the ground work is dark the pattern is light, either in two shades or more.

Tennis cloth is a new Scotch material of fine wool, with enough cotton added to keep it from shrinking, yet it is soft, pliant, exceedingly light, and comes in all the pretty stripes and new colors of the Scotch gingham.

Printed chali dresses of fine wool are to be worn this spring and summer. The cream grounds with gay figures are made with velvet collars, revers and a border of the velvet on the lower skirt just showing under the long over-skirt. The newest velvets come in plaids or stripes; the plaids are Scotch plaids and consequently have many colors composing them, all harmonizing nicely. Gray will be very fashionable the coming season, as all the new goods, even calicoes, come in gray and drab. White dresses will be worn; they are made of nainsook, Victoria lawn, pique, nun's veiling, canvas cloth and boutique wool.

Summer silks are the Indian silks in colored figures on pale grounds or on white, or else they are in solid colors, such as porcelain blue, primrose pink, or scarlet, with velvet of a darker shade or in contrast for trimming.—Detroit Free Press.

A PROFITABLE CROP.

How to Make Hora-Radish Culture Reasonably Successful.

In order to obtain a satisfactory crop of horse-radish, it is absolutely necessary that it should be grown in a very deep loamy soil and one that has been deeply and thoroughly cultivated for a previous crop. This soil should be given a liberal dressing of well-decayed manure, and it should be as deeply and thoroughly incorporated with the soil as possible by means of first the plow, and then a harrow so as to level it off as nicely as possible; it should then be marked off into rows about two feet apart. In these rows the sets are to be planted some sixteen inches apart, which should be done as early as the ground can be properly prepared in the spring. The planting is performed by making a hole from five to seven inches in depth, with a long stick or crowbar; into this hole the set is dropped in such a manner that the top is about two inches under the surface, at the same time pressing in enough earth to fill up the hole. As soon as the crop is up so that the rows can be distinguished a light hoeing should be given, after which keep the crop clean and free from weeds until the middle of November, when the crop can be taken up and stored for winter use. After the crop is dug all of the small roots should be broken off and reserved for another season's planting. The large or main roots should be packed in boxes, filled with sand and stored in a cool cellar.

If the ground has been properly prepared the main root should be eight or ten inches in length and weigh about half a pound.

The rootlets should be cut into pieces, or sets, about four or five inches in length, the top end being square and the bottom end slanting so that there will be no danger of setting the root upside down in planting. They should be buried in the ground out-of-doors until wanted for planting in the spring.

I notice that some persons always insist on planting the crowns or tops of the main roots instead of the rootlets or sets.

I believe this all wrong and would not advise any one to do this; it not only destroys the most valuable part of the root, but the crowns produce a mass of rootlets only, and those are very difficult to use as sets for another year's planting.

The entire crop should be dug out in the fall and on no account should it be left for another season; if this is done the main root will become partially hollow and assume such a woody texture as to render it unfit for use.—Chas. E. Parnell, in Our Country Home.

Sportsmen for War.

A very picturesque innovation will shortly be introduced into the Russian army. By order of the Minister of War an exercise which hitherto has been the privilege of Kings and nobles will form part of the military training, since every regiment in the army will have its detachment of sportsmen, who will wage war against the wolf, the bear and all kinds of game. Besides gaining considerable knowledge of the topography of the different districts by hunting, the sportsmen, the Government believes, will be better prepared to undertake perilous and difficult missions in time of war if the soldiers have been accustomed to the dangers which they will have to encounter in their sport in the immense forests of the interior of Russia.—Chicago Herald.

—The meanest man in the country has just left the Black Hills region. He entered into correspondence with a young woman in New York, whose address he had learned through a matrimonial agency, and finally proposed marriage. She accepted him and went to Dakota to be his wife. The night before she came he vanished. When last heard from he was running for the wilds of Montana.
