Econse Crry, July 12th.

A sightly and interesting young city. A vigorous and growing young city, an intellectual and classic city. It impresses the visitor as being a place of laste and refluement. An air of thrift pervades the business houses and hotels. Every one seems to feel the rising. Title of transparity. Numerous brick ing tide of prosperity. Numerous brick stores have been lately erected and the streets are in fine condition. The masons are constructing a large three-story brick on the rear half of their lot and have sold the orner to a gentleman on condition that he shall forthwith erect another brick. The wide extended limits of Eugene City are dotted with lovely residences, the homes of wealth and contentment. It is in fact an ideal university town. An adjacent high hill furnishes it with a tremendous water power for city purposes, and water is abundant and cheap. Wells are sunk to a depth of only twelve feet and develop excellent water. Lying near the footbills under the shadow of the Calapooias and the Cascades and in full view of the Three Sisters, Eugene at the head of the Willamette valley is necessarily to the control of the calapooias and the cascades and the cascades are the head of the Willamette valley is necessarily the calaborates. sarily a prosperous place, it being also the capital of Lane county which extends from the mountains to the sea coast a distance of of over 150 miles, embracing resources of nearly every kind and a large amount of fine farming land. A Poem With a Moral.

He was reared in the lap of luxury, Had no care with his daily bread. But the fickle goddess had willed it That trouble should fall on his head.

From his old man's well-carned thousands He had hitherto drawn his supplies, But when the old man made a "bust up" The young one opened his eyes.

He found that the wreck of their fortune Had been helped by acts of his own, And he learned that constant dropping Had worn away the stone.

And limits in drawing eash,
But he never thought ought about it
Till the old man went to smash. When his London-cut pants grew seedy, And he longed for another pair, A staunch friend said: "Go to Simon,

There are limits to human endurance,

You're sure to get them there.' So he hastened in that direction, He swore "by gawgs" there is no difference At least so far as I see,

Between Stichem's high-priced trousers And what Simon asks you to buy, So Simon shall have my custom, And a pair of his pants I'll try. They were sent home and he tried them,

His countenance beamed with delight, And his best girl said they were "killing, When he called on her that night.

Ever after he practiced economy, Was thrifty, contented and wise, And thanked the good angel who sent him A friend to open his eyes.

In the afternoon some foot-racing and beatracing took place. It was reported that there were several weddings on the river on the Fourth, but as all the parties most deeply interested emphatically deny the accusation, we are compelled to the belief that Dame Rumor was simply asticipating that which in the course of human events undoubtedly will take place.
