While our pretty mail carrier, Miss Anna Whisman, was passing Beecher rock with the mail last Saturday, three bears came out of the river and crossed the road within a few rods of her, two behind, and one in front of her. Her horse, a spirited one and unac-customed to such a sight, became unmanageable, throwing her in the midst of the unwelcome visitors with such violence as to cause unconsciousness, in which condition she remained a few minutes. She soon recovered sufficiently to catch her horse and continue her journey. What young lady in Lane Co. can beat this for an adventure. DEMOCBAT.

A Poem With a Moral.

He was reared in the lap of luxury, Had no care with his daily bread. But the fickle goddess had willed it That trouble should fall on his head.

From his old man's well-earned thousands He had hitherto drawn his supplies, But when the old man made a "bust up The young one opened his eyes.

He found that the wreck of their fortune Had been helped by acts of his own, And he learned that constant dropping Had worn away the stone.

There are limits to human endurance, And limits in drawing cash, But he never thought ought about it Till the old man went to smash.

And he longed for another pair, A staunch friend said: "Go to Simon You're sure to get them there. So he hastened in that direction,

When his London-cut pants grew seedy,

He swore "by gawgs" there is no difference

Between Stichem's high-priced trousers And what Simon asks you to buy, So Simon shall have my custom, And a pair of his pants I'll try.

They were sent home and he tried them, His countenance beamed with delight, And his best girl said they were "killing," When he called on her that night.

Ever after he practiced economy, Was thrifty, contented and wise, And thanked the good angel who sent him A friend to open his eyes.

Miln as Hamlet

Mr. George C. Miln was greeted at the New Market theater last night by an audience twice as large as that which witnessed his Richelieu, and his performance of "Hamlet" was received with every mark of enthusiastiand at the woolen factory, besides making favor. Mr. Miln's appearance is in his favor numerous other improvements. Water was as Hamlet. A fine, scholarly face, surmountagain turned into the race last Thursday ed by dark, waving hair; an intellectual cast countenance, with eyes that flash fire and fill with tears; added to this the utmost grace of movement, combine to make his physical equipment for the part of Hamlet co His intellectual strength and insight into the subtletles of Shakespeare have long been coneded; but it is safe to say that the remarks ble force and infinite variety of his method in the treatment of this character was a surprise to a majority of his auditors. Hamlet in Miln's hands is left—as it should be—an impenetrable mystery. Sadness, mystery, anger, defeated love, revenge, hesitation, and at last precipitate action—in a word, "the psalm of life," this is his Hamlet. Mr. Miln serves to be congratulated on his splendid performance of this difficult role, which places him in the first rank of American
