JUDGE AND REFORMER.

Magistrate Whose Methods Are Reforms

All that is told, and much more, too, I fancy, concerning Recorder Smyth's sternness, relentlessness, and utter disregard for those conditions that so often affect frail man's judgment is probably the literal truth, and if there is an edifying spectacle on the face of this selfish earth it is that presented by a judicial officer who is both able to perceive and fearless to do his duty. This involves many virtues and the Recorder possesses them. No one would claim for him profundity of intellect, or great learning, or that culture which so becomes exalted men. The dignity he holds is an ancient one, for his is the oldest of our municipal trusts, and was in existence before James II, handed down the Dongan Grant. The great Chancellor Kent, whose text-books are the law-student's gospel, held it in 1796. when it was then a century old. Pierre Van Wyck, Richard Riker, Samuel Jones, and ex-Governor Hoffman have each presided over this ancient court. These were, perhaps, greater men than Frederick Smyth, and yet it is a quession if they did more good for their day than he is doing for his in holding back tle fast-growing tide of crime. For his methods are reformative as well as him, one of a gang of criminals led to the bar to plead. He did not look like a knave.

"What are you here for?" asked the court.

"I am charged with grand larceny, sir," he said, "and I am guilty." "Do you know the consequences of what you say? Have you counsel?" took the money and I will take my punishment." "What is your name?"

He hesitated. "I am indicted under a fa's name. I've brought disgrace to Pennsylvania. He attributes his exmy family and I won't tell my name." "Look here, my boy," said the Recorder, "I don't want to send you to prison. Tell me the names of some of for cleausing purposes. Chickens and your friends. Write them down on paper and I'll send for them and see what I can do for you." For an instant his face brightened, but the flush died quickly away. "No, sir, I-can't. I can't bear this much longer. Let me go to jail."

The Judge was satisfied that many mitigating circumstances existed in the man, and instead of sentencing him he sent him back to the Tombs. A day or two afterward two well-known and wealthy men called on him. They had formerly employed the boy. He had served them faithfully, had been bright Frenchman is the idol and the especial and honest. He had collected some money one day and had met a friend who persuaded him to go Coney Island. mount a restive horse in so graceful He went, and, though unused to whisky, and charming a way, and the same had got drunk. What became of the money he never knew, but the disgrace nearly broke him down. Recorder Smyth sent for him and gave him fatherly talk. Then he arraigned him in court and suspended sentence. And among the Recorder's treasures is a letter from the young man, now a purser on a great ocean steamship handling thousands and often millions in And honest men abound," some people say, money and values-a letter full of thanks and praises .- N. Y. Tribune.

ONE CAT AT A TIME. Don't Scatter Your Shot If You Want to

A youngster, whose upper lip betrays signs of the coming soup filter, wants to know what basiness will pay him best. That is a hard question. If he is looking for the article that causes the female equine to get up and hump herself, and cares not how he obtains it, he might acquire a considerable quantity by opening a savings bank and suspending at the proper time; but if are these 'trusts' one reads so much he has not the talent to become a first- about lately ?" Adolphus-"A "trust" class thief, he had best select some legitimate business and stick to it until he is either called to join the angels or acquires a competency. It is not always the most talented men who become most successful. The brilliant men are too often brilliant failures. They can do almost any thing, andthey don't do it-while men with less talent but more judgment fight it out on their chosen line through storm and calm, and bag the game. The man who can do one thing well is in greater demand than the man who can do almost any thing indifferently. Load your artillery carefully and blaze away at the same Thomas cat until you fetch hlm. Don't cripple him and let him get away while you are looking for a flock of felines to tire into. We know a man who is an indifferent workman at turee trades, and has dabbled in a dozen different lines of business. He is not worth a dollar, and yet he is ambitious and possessed of considerable talent. He was in too big a harry to get rich. He scattered his shot. He wanted to bag a barn full of cats at once, and the consequence is that he is out of cats, while his more patient neighbors have felines to throw at the birds. Don't scatter your shot. - Texas Siflings.

A HANDSOME GIFT.

A HANDSOME GIFT.

If the merit of a book is to be judged from its circulation, the ISS catalogue of Messrs, Staver & Walker, of the Newmarket Block, Fortland, Or., must certainly be an excellent work. The orst edition alone comests of thirty thousand copies, and even this enormous number bids fair to soon become esh usted if the demand for the book continues as brisk as it has been since the day of publication. It is not a little curious to find a mere catalogue—a kind of publication usually considered the dryest of dry reading—o cageriy sought after. But having seen the book, one's surprise at the cager demand ceases. It is really not too much to say that Messrs, Staver & Walker have produced a look, the contents of which is as interesting as its general appearance is handsome. The covers, lithos raphed in eight colors on heavy roughened card display, on the front, artistically grouped the heads of two blooded horses, the Newmarket Block, and an elegant cabriolet, the whole effect being attractive and striking in the extreme. On the back cover are sellected by executed pleaners of some of the machines handled by the firm. Fetween these covers are left or mixetly printed pages teeming with first class illustrations, and gring interesting description of prity nearly every kind of farm, dairy and mill machinery, wagons, buggies, carrieges at all sects of mechanical novelties useful in the home and on the farm. Considerable space is devoted to illustrations of the magnificent threshers and engines which lave done nucl to make the name of Staver & Walker amounce that copies will be maled free to all applicants.
