A CONFUCIAN CONVERT.

Hoolay for Hallison—Joe Foo Scalps Cleveland—Harrison His Delight—Why?

Last week, the citizens of this place were astonished to find a letter from a rather intelligent Chinaman in the Journal, the Republican organ of Lane county. What made it more surprising was that Joe Foo's letter, the product of "pauper labor," was praised locally and editorially. "Democratic lie" cannot be shouted this time, for Joe Foo is a Republican, the Journal and a employer are Republicans also. We give the letter, which the Journal says is printed as written by its Mongolian author:

There is residing in Eugene, working for a prominent business man, a young Chinaman of more than ordinary intelligence, named Jo. He can read and write English, is inquisitive and seeks to improve his education. Being asked the other day, whom he favored for president, he replied, "I like Hallison and Chinamen all like him; he our friend." He said he would like to vote.—GUARD.

MR. KINCAID: I read him and cut him out for you. Mr. GUARD he mean me, he don't know me say nothing to him. Good Chinamen have right in this country. Me like way Hallison talk, me read papers and learn heap. Hallison make many good speech. He pay soldiers help make Nigger free. Me don't bieve he hate Chinamen. Mr. Cleveland no pay soldiers. He keep pension all lock up, no make speech, when he write, heap melican no understand. Hallison says Chinamen have some right all the same.

2 Government can fix what with Chinamen. Me work very good man pay every week. Melican law good, heap melican lazy. Chinamen work good have respect. Can you read him. Joe Foo.

Two Market Quotations.

In last Wednesday's Oregonian wheat was quoted at $1.25 per cental in Portland; according to the same columns wheat was quoted in Liverpool on the same day at $1.63 1/2 per cental, or 75 cents a bushel in Portland and 97 cents in pauper England.

Oregon sells $10,000,000 of wheat to England, and $2,000,000 of salmon and other products. Twelve-thirteenth of the money that comes into Oregon each year is "English gold." So important is the English market that every day in the year, the Oregonian and every other daily Republican paper in the country print cablegrams giving quotations of prices in pauper London, while they have no word of prices from the other States of Europe, which have protective tariffs by side of which our tariff is Free Trade, and where the most abject, squalid and deplorable poverty exists if Republican papers tell the truth.

The Republican farmer has chased that will-o'-the-wisp, a "home market" for twenty-eight years. At the invitation of Republican leaders they will chase it twenty-eight years longer. But the export of $750,000,000 annually to foreign countries is the very basis of our prosperity and will remain so. We are compelled to export four times more than in 1860. Our population has hardly doubled in that time.

A Few Straws.

The San Francisco (Cal.) Democrat, the leading German Republican paper of the Coast for thirty years, is out for Cleveland and Thurman.

The Omaha Tribune, leading German Republican paper of Nebraska, advocates the election of Cleveland; ditto the Lincoln Free Press.

"Norden," the most influential Scandinavian paper in the United States, heretofore strongly Republican opposes the Republican ticket and gives as its reason, their advocacy of war taxes in times of peace. Norden is for Cleveland.

The Indianapolis Journal, Harrison's enthusiastic home organ, is not afraid of the Chinese issue, as the following extract from an editorial published in its columns amply demonstrates:

"They who shout 'the Chinese must go' are as mistaken as the dweller on the Yaxoo who stands upon the banks and curses the Father of Waters. His virtues are sobriety, modesty, patience and economy, and he is a teacher to the labor of all lands. Whatever his faults, his lesson must be learned by the strikers and grumblers everywhere, for none other has so successfully met and triumphed over the hardest conditions of life. He is a wonder and a marvel, an astonishment and a surprise.

Hon. John M. Garvin, of Portland, Oregon, is visiting San Francisco, accompanied by his family. He is one of the leading lawyers and strong men of Oregon, and is just now singular amongst politicians by reason of taking his recent defeat for Congress gracefully, declaring the position of that party to be right and his confidence that it will finally win. Mr. Garvin is here for a rest and to benefit his health, which suffered some during the campaign.—S. F. Alta.

Melville W. Fuller has been confirmed, by a vote of 41 to 20, as Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court. In spite of the Oregonian's free use of the word "Copperhead" in connection with the name of Mr. Fuller, many Republican Senators voted for him. Senator Mitchell voted for confirmation and Dolph against.

George William Curtis, though a Republican, evidently understands the issue before the country when he says: "Cleveland proposes freer clothing; his opponents freer whisky."

Calvin S. Brice, of Ohio, Chairman of the National Democratic Executive Committee, was 15 years old when the war broke out. He enlisted and remained in the service until the close of the war.

The Mills tariff bill passed the house by a vote of 162 to 149 last Saturday. Three Democrats voted against the bill, and two Republicans and four independents for it. The rate of duty provided for by the Mills bill is 42.7 per cent. The Senate will reject the bill.

Me don't bieve Hallison hate Chinamen.—Joe Foo in Eugene Journal.

An Oregonian Romance.

PITTSBURG, July 17.—George A. Macbeth & Co., the chimney glass manufacturers, are seriously considering the advisability of removing their works to Belgium. They are the largest manufacturers of chimney glass in the United States, employing 450 men and turning out 2,000 gross tons of chimneys a week. They have all but decided to move to Belgium, and the reason for this step is the large duty on all their raw materials except lead, and continual trouble with their men who will only work ten months a year. The duty on glass chimneys is 45 per cent., and Macbeth & Co. say they can make them in Belgium and sell them here at a profit, because their raw material would not be taxed and their workmen would work twelve months a year and six days a week.—Pittsburg Special to New York World.

Heavy cost of raw material, is the reason given for the removal by the manufacturers. The Oregonian says it is because of the high price of labor here. Therefore, the Oregonian and Macbeth & Co., differ on this important question to the manufacturer. The latter say if they remove to Belgium where they can get raw materials cheap they can pay 45 cents on every dollar's worth of lamp chimneys, $45 on every $100 and then make more money from the $55 left, than they would make from the lamp chimneys made in Pittsburg, and for which they now ask $145. To show the absurdity and futility of the Oregonian's assertion it is only necessary to state, that if all the labor used in making lamp chimneys was given Macbeth & Co. FREE it would not amount to one-half of the forty-five dollars, which they sell here for. They would have to pay duty on the hundred dollars worth of goods imported from Belgium. For in these days of invention, the work is done by machinery, and the raw material costs six-sevenths of the expense of the manufactured article, and when a heavy tax is laid on raw materials, the burden falls on manufacturers. That is just what the Oregonian knows, but it will not say it during campaign times.

Protective Europe.

An extract published in a contemporary is ludicrous. It quotes wages in Germany, France and Italy and with great emphasis tells us to beware of "Free Trade," or wages will fall to the standard of wages in those countries.

Now all of them are blessed with higher tariffs than our, and if the higher tariff the higher the wages, then the wages would be higher here than there. But a high tariff of a million per cent, would not raise the wages of their workmen one cent.

The very article itself says that England, the only Free trade country in Europe, pays the highest wages in Europe. In Germany and France with their high tariffs, workmen get only one-half of English wages, and Italians, with a higher tariff still, one fourth.

Tariffs do not raise wages, they are taxes levied for the uses of Government, and as subsidies to capitalists. Does any one think that a high tariff in China would raise the wages of Chinamen to a dollar a day? If so he can be assured they have the highest kind of a tariff there, and pay labor two cents a day. The reason for this is easy to find, China is overpopulated, so are France, Germany and Italy. England, Scotland and Ireland have an area of only 121,000 square miles, and a population of 35,000,000. If the United States were as densely occupied the United States would have a population of over 1,000,000,000. Oregon would have 28,000,000 people, and then no tariff would raise wages for us. Our present high rate of wages paid is because of our small population and the resources of a country thirty times the size of some European states.

No Return Possible.

[Providence Journal, Rep.]

The Albany Express thinks there is no middle ground between the existing tariff and free trade. "For," it says, "the moment you begin to modify existing tariff laws, you must apply to that modification either one principle or the other. If you abandon the protective principle, then you apply the free trade principle." So, so. Then a man who usually eats a peck or drinks a quart cannot modify his practices unless he accepts the alternative of eating nothing or drinking nothing; the theatre which charges one dollar admission customarily can charge no less unless it charges nothing, and the cannibal who ordinarily eats a man a week must either keep it up at that rate or give up being a cannibal. Somehow the laws of nature have been changed lately. There are, it seems, no means; only extremes. A popular novelist once said that virtue was the means between two vicious extremes. But he must have been deluded. Or perhaps the Albany Express is. Perhaps this journal, which does not admit that when there are two ends to a thing there is also something between, would be forced to the conclusion that a firefly was a June bug, because one of the former species once upon a time went and bumped its head against a wall, after the time-honored manner of the latter.

Great Cry and Little Wool.

Before the election no falsehood was more industriously peddled than the statement that millions of pounds of wool had been imported into this country and was being held in the bonded warehouses.

Now the truth is simply this: At the present time there is less wool in the bonded warehouses than for years before. Our authority for this is the commercial column of the Oregonian a few days after election.

A notable defection from Republicanism is reported from Lebanon, Boone county, Ill. D. Stephen Neal, who originated and drafted the amendment known as the Fourteenth amendment to the Constitution which he forwarded to Godlove S. Orth in Washington, it being adopted substantially as he wrote it, has declined recently to accompany a delegation of 180 voters of that city and introduce them to General Harrison. He now declares himself openly for Cleveland. He objects to the tariff and whisky planks of the Chicago platform, and the tendency of the Republican party to perpetuate strife and unfriendly feelings between the North and South.

Mr. Harrison should recommend this campaign song to his literary bureau at once:

"John Chinaman, my jo John, When we were first acquaint, 'T was said that you must go, John, And yet you never went; For I stood by you then, John, Through thick and thin you know, And you'll stand by me now I think, John Chinaman, my jo."

"No duty on Northern wool" is the way in which one Republican organ seeks to create a sectional prejudice here against the Mills Bill. Mr. Mills is from Texas, and that state had in 1880 2,411,633 sheep—more than were owned in any Northern state except Ohio. And yet in spite of his local interest the Democratic leader of the house has the pluck of his principles.

Me like way Hallison talk. He make many good speeches.—Joe Foo in Eugene Journal.

S. B. Riggan of Portland, manager of a large number of insurance companies, is out in a long article in Sunday's Oregonian in which he says: "Hitherto I have uniformly voted for three Republican nominees for President. But on this occasion if I shall live till the 8th of November I propose to vote for Grover Cleveland." One by one the honest, intelligent voters are falling in with the right.

The Oregonian published a telegram last week that ex-Congress Henley was for Harrison; Henley promptly denied it. The Oregonian claimed editorially last Thursday that a partner of Senator Payne, is a Democrat, but will vote for Cleveland; the said partner has been a Republican since 1880.

Republican campaign badges have made their appearance. They consist of a small United States flag with the name of high born Harrison and the London banker upon them, and twelve stars, intended probably to represent the twelve states they may carry.
