SHOES FOR CRIPPLEL

▲ Queer Little New York Cobbler Who Does a Rushing Business.

There's a funny little man who runs a queer little shoe shop in East Broadway. It is a "hole in the wall," and might properly be called a den. It is rot a tidy place, either, but it makes no, difference to its pinch-faced occupant, for he gets a lot of money by making boots and shoes for cripples. He does nothing else, and seems to enjoy a monopoly of the custom of people with deformed feet.

"How much do you charge for such a pair of shoes?" asked a reporter, as he picked up a Congress galter ornamented with a 5-inch heel and a 2-inch sole.

"Twelve dollars; but," he added, "I usually get $15. This pair of shoes, however, is for a poor man who can't afford to pay the regular price. Sometimes I get $20 for a pair, but not often."

The little shoemaker said that a person desiring a shoe comes in and removes his foot covering, then he measures the distance between the bottom of the shoe and the floor to determine how much cork is needed in the sole. The measuring of the foot proper does not differ much from the measuring of ordinary feet. He makes only thremeasurements-one at the ball of the foot, one at the heel and one at the tes. Certain afflicted persons wish the r shoes made with space between the heel and the sole on the idea that it gives the foot a spring it would not possess were the sole and heel or piece. Each customer has his pendliarities.

The man had just f. dahed three pairs for a gentleman in the suclesale liquor business in this city, who formerly had his shoes made in Paris, London and Vienna without getting satisfaction. That gentleman has a short foot, but so deftly is it clothed that even his intimate friends do not know that he is deformed.

Instead of putting the cork which raises the foot on the outside he places it inside, thus making the boot well proportioned. 'The wearer's foot rests easily, the heel half way up the leg with a curved, sloping support for the instop and the toes about half way down the middle of the foot. The little man said there were many persons who have one foot shorter than the other, and if their shoes were made to fit the short foot it would give them the appearance of having had their toes amputated.

"There's nothing easier," remarked the little man, "than to prevent this by making the shoe for the short foot as long as the shoe for the normal foot, and filling in the space between the end of the toes and the end of the shoe with light cork."

More trouble is experienced in constructing shoes for club-footed people than any other. This is principall; because the foot is turned in and upward, so that the sole is presented to the rear and the person has to walk on the side of his foot. Measurements of such feet can not be successfully taken. A casting has to be made of the foot and then a last formed from that : the sole must be of cork and the upper carefully fitted into every curve and wrinkle in the foot. It requires much skill to make a shoe for a man whose foot has been cut off just above the ankle, for he is obliged to make a leg as well as a last. The queer little cobbler was unable to say how many men with deformed foet had come under his eye, but he knew there were thousands of them.

The first religious newspaper published in America was issued in Ohio, and called The Recorder.

A WATCH SPRING NEST.

How a Wise Swiss Bird Built a Habitation for Her Family.

A RETURNED TOURIST :- "This last trip, during my wanderings in Switzerland, I happened to be detained for a day in the little town of Soleure. A: the day happened to be a rainy one and there were few attractions for me indoors, I strolled into the little local museum. "The collection of curiosities was not extensive and I found little to interest me. I was about to leave in disgust and seek in the seclusion of my room the comfort which a pipe grants. when suddenly my eye caught something, which turned out to be a veritable curiosity.

"It was a bird's nest, which at first had nothing out of the ordinary in its appearance, and had it not been for a metallic glint on a portion of it I would, no doubt, have passed it by. Upon examining it I found that it was made of-what do you suppose? Watch springs.

"Upon inquiry I found that numbers of imperfect springs are thrown out of the little watch factories which abound in this district. Some bird seems to have considered them excellent material of which to construct her nest and with infinite care worked them together into as perfect a structure of the kind as one could desire to see. The nest was picked up a short time before my visit and was at once placed in the museum. The idea struck me that Switzerland is indeed a great country for watch-making, when the very birds know how to make use of watch springs."-Jewelers' Weekly.
