McAllister Indicted.

A dispatch from Jacksonville under date of Sept. 3d, says: The grand jury to-day found an indictment charging a murder in the first degree against John J. McAllister, the boy who shot and killed his father, Richard H. McAllister, while he was asleep in his cabin near Woodville, Jackson county, on the night of July 2nd last. His trial will come up at this term of court, probably commencing next week.

Young McAllister is only sixteen years of age, and diminutive in size. He made a voluntary confession to District Attorney Colvig, a few evenings since, in the presence of witnesses, in which he acknowledged having committed the murder, and says that his mother, who resides in Lane county, instructed him to kill his father and then return home.

He also says that his mother tried to kill her husband by poisoning him on different occasions, and that he thought he should obey her, although he is now sorry for it. He does not seem to recognize the enormity of his crime. He cannot freely with all, and is in quite good spirits.
