The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I can cheerfully and truthfully say that S. S. S. is the greatest blood purifier on earth. In 1884 I contracted blood poison. Physicians treated me with no good results. I took a half dozen different kinds of blood medicines, but, without receiving any permanent relief. I was induced to try S. S. S. I began the first bottle with the greatest doubts of success. I had been so often deceived. But improvement came, and I continued its use until perfectly well. I have since married, and have a healthy family. No trace of the disease is seen. Swift's Specific did all this for me, and I am grateful. Yours truly,

A Visitor's Opinion Of Oregon.

EUGENE CITY, Oct. 8th, 1888.

EDITOR EUGENE CITY GUARD:

One can hardly pick up a paper published anywhere on this coast that does not have something to say of the wonderful. In California it is either the climate, soil, fruit, immense yield of cereals, or townships proclaimed to the world under a double-header "Boom." These exciting times are fast passing away in that state, and homeseekers are now hunting something more substantial than climate and desert lands at fabulous prices. The writer is a Californian who has been sojourning in this beautiful city of the upper Willamette for a time, and is satisfied that Oregon is fast coming to the front for her share of Eastern immigration, and feels free to express to the public that homeseekers will find the Willamette valley the garden spot of the Pacific Coast. The climatic advantages and productive soil of this valley are now attracting a large portion of the westbound travel, buyers of land for homes are learning that here they can secure better lands for $20 to $30 per acre than they can get in California for $150 to $500. Here we have the best soil in the world at a very low figure that cannot be bought five years hence for less than $75 to $100 per acre. The time will come and that speedily when these lands will be regarded as a bonanza with dividend equal to the palmiest days of the Comstock. Never in the history of Oregon has there been a brighter or more substantial boom than at the present time. Tourists and homeseekers are heading for this state, and every train brings a large delegation to some point along the line of the railroad, even Californians, who never let a good thing escape them, are becoming quite numerous, and judging from the large purchases some of them have made lately, they mean business. Eastern and California capital is being invested all over the state and Lane county is receiving a large share; she does not expect a wildcat boom, but a healthy and permanent growth. Lane county has a large area of the best land in the state. Nature has done a great deal for her; she has within her borders, sea coast, mountain ranges, grazing land, grain, fruit and hop lands, fine forests of timber, and excellent water power. Her rivers and brooks are numerous with never failing, clear, cold water, fed from the glaciers of the Cascades and the great ranges. Fish are very plentiful in the streams and creeks, and wild birds abound in the forest. The cereal crop this year was beyond the average and the acreage larger than formerly. Grain is all stored either in barns or warehouses in excellent condition. The hop crop is large and mostly sold or contracted at prices ranging from 12 to 15 cents. The advent of railroads has given Oregon closer commercial intercourse with the markets of the world. Now the Oregon farmer feels more encouraged than formerly, when the P. S. S. Co. took their wheat for freight charges and failed to return the sacks. Under the iron heel of former freight monopolies the Oregon farmer retrograded both financially and otherwise, many became bankrupt and the state at large vegetated along with seeming indifference. But under the new order of the iron wheels a change is taking place. The "moss-backs" are fast giving way to the energetic Yankees. Ere long the squatter cabin of pioneer days will be replaced with more substantial edifices, and those who fail to possess themselves with some of the cheap lands of today, will soon lose the golden opportunity. Till recently it was but little known East that other fruits than the apple grew to perfection north of the Siskiyou. But since the completion of the N. P. Railroad, Oregon fruits have taken their place in the commercial world at figures over all competitors, and it only requires further competition in freights to secure the fruit grower handsome profits. In quantity, quality, size and flavor, the Oregon staple fruits excite the admiration of all visitors, Eastern people express astonishment and deprecate the wonderful. I have often heard expressions of admiration over certain specimens mentioned. Such praise falls to do justice. All varieties of cultured fruits reach the same perfection nowhere else attained. I find that all cultivated orchards are overburdened with choice fruit and naturally show the best results. Fruit raising is destined to be the leading industry of the Willamette valley; it is the home of the prune, plum, pear, apple, cherry and small fruits. The peach and apricot are finely adapted to the foothills both east and west of the valley. Fruit never fails here; if cultivated they grow in great profusion. It is useless to speak of single branches or clusters, when every well cultivated orchard in the valley is a mass of fruit and every tree bristling with poles trying to hold up the overburdened limbs. Oregon does not touch the range of semi-tropical fruits, but she offers a very beautiful and certain home for the products of the temperate zone, such fruits are not excelled in any climate. Oregon offers better inducements to the homeseeker than elsewhere which cannot fail to draw the best agricultural citizens of the East, under whose management she will soon take her place on a more healthful foundation than from which California towers. Eugene, the county seat of Lane county, and to be beautiful little city situated on the bank of the Willamette river with a population of over 3000 inhabitants. The location is excellent, designed by nature as a site for a city, and possessing superior natural advantages for health and attractiveness. She has the State University, and an observatory under course of construction by contract to be completed this fall. The city is lighted by electricity, enjoys fine water works and water power, fine companies, fine school and church facilities. The citizens are mostly God serving and energetic, promoting the educational and moral worth of their children. In fact, the morals of Eugene are such that the most select would not hesitate to locate a future home. With the advantages every day presenting themselves, is it not safe to predict that Oregon has before her a bright future?
EUREKA.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature. The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easy to put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sticky food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things that ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics. But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy. Remember—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

Notice.

Chas. Baker has leased the Baker house from Mrs. Baker and purchased the business. All debts previous to Aug. 15 are payable by and to Mrs. Baker.

The Lost Bark "Glenavon."

Astoria, Sept. 24.

Thirteen months ago, to-day, the British bark Glenavon sailed from here to Liverpool, carrying a cargo of flour, wheat and salmon worth nearly $200,000.

From the day of her sailing nothing was heard of her and as the months went by and she became due at her home port anxiety deepened into dread and, at last the vessel was listed at Lloyd's as "missing," a brief but ominous verdict.

On the ill-fated vessel there went as a passenger a young man aged 23, a resident of Salem, named Omega Port, a son of Lake A. Port, of that city. Incidentally a townsman of his, Dr. T. H. Parks, learned that some of those on board the bark Villalta, now in the river, knew something of the lost bark.

From the steward and the cabin boy he learned that the Villalta bound from Australia to Liverpool was in about the same waters as the Glenavon; that they sighted her frequently and probably spoke her, though of the latter the narrators are not sure. On December 24th, a terrible storm was raging in that quarter. During the afternoon it was terrific. A hurricane was blowing at the rate of eighty miles an hour. The two vessels were then about eight hundred miles west of the Foote group of islands. During the storm the Villalta lost two masts, and for a while the captain feared he would have to cut away the third to save his vessel. The Glenavon was in sight of the Villalta during most of the storm. Though several miles apart the vessels were in plain view of each other. The Glenavon had all her masts and rigging carried away, and being deeply laden and totally at the mercy of the winds and waves she finally foundered.

Through the storm the crew of the other vessel saw her make the final plunge. It was about six o'clock Christmas when the doomed vessel forever sank from sight in the heaving waters of mid-ocean. She went under stern first, a tremendous sea overwhelming her.

The Villalta was about a league to windward at the time, and her horrified crew were helpless spectators of the catastrophe any human assistance being impossible as the waves were running so high that no boat could live in that sea a minute. Before the unfortunate vessel went down all her boats had been stove in, and were of no use. She had before making signals of distress for some time previous to sinking.

A Relic of Pioneer Days.

[Junction City Pilot, Oct. 5.]

Messrs. W. G. Pickett and R. P. Caldwell of this city, who have just returned from Kitson's Spring, on the middle fork of the Willamette, where they have been taking an outing of a few weeks, report a circumstance which, we think, will be of interest to all, and particularly will be so to those now old people who were the pioneers of '33.

It is this: About two weeks ago a Mr. Wm. Hill, by accident, happened to look into a large hollow tree, and to his surprise saw standing in it a gun, which there is every reason to believe was left there by mistake or otherwise by some of the immigrants of those early days; probably by some of that train that crossed the Cascades by the middle fork route, and whose hardships and privations were most terrible. It may be that some of those people still living in this region will remember something about it, and it may be that the owner is still living.

It was found at the side of what is said to be the old immigrant road, about thirty miles this side of the summit of the Cascades. It was of the old stiff lock kind and its mountings were of brass, and of the kind the people of forty years ago so much admired. When Mr. Hill attempted to lift it the stock gave way at the grip, having become rotten. The ramrod had all rotted away except about three or four inches, which still remained in its position. The stock is supposed to be of maple or walnut, and the ramrod of hickory or white oak.

There was an incident occurred at about the time the gun must have been lost, that must still be fresh in the memory of the pioneers that crossed the cascades by that route, and which occurred within one hour of death of where the gun was found. We refer to the drowning of a Mr. Patty who was one of that train that suffered so much in reaching this country.

A traveling man, stopping at the Lee House, Campbellsburg, Ind., on learning that a lady in the village was suffering terribly with cramp colic, gave the landlady a bottle of medicine, which he had with him and requested her to take it to the sick woman. The medicine relieved her promptly and she believes saved her life. It was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, the promptest and most reliable medicine in use for Bowel complaints. Sold by Osburn & Co.

Cholera Morbus is one of the most painful and dangerous diseases, many deaths resulting from it each year, usually because it is not properly treated. The most severe cases may be cured by using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Sold by Osburn & Co.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was used with great success during our epidemic of bloody Flux. I do not know of a case that was lost where this remedy was used. One of my friends, about six miles from here, had a child that was given up by the two doctors who attended it. He then used Chamberlain's Cholera, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and the child recovered. All who have used it speak of it in the highest terms. Wishing you abundant success for the good you are doing, I am, Very Truly Yours,—F. E. LAWRENCE, P. M., Chestnut, Amherst Co., Va. Sold by Osburn & Co.
