Thousands of Years.

Wine-making is said to have existed for thousands of years before the introduction of distilling. The process is simple. Glutinous rice hwang-mi, is placed over a fire in a 'arge fron pan and softened with warm water. It is made into a thick, solid prt of a gruch This steeped rice is plased on a table with raised edges to prevent the fluid from overflowing. Over the rice, when in this state, the leaven to aid fermontation is sprinkled. The whole is then mixed and mashed with in iron masher, and romains in a large stoneware jar for soveral days. If the wine is desired to be of a sweetiaste, two days are enough; but for wins without sweet taste four or five days are required. To make the second kind of wine stronger, the Chinese brower often adds spirit. After all this the wins falld and liquid parts together, is placed in a cloth bag, and this goes into a passing chest of wood, called eas, the sine press A Pouglas, jr., to be United States district attorney for the Northern district of Illiheavy stone presses it down and the wine flows out from a cot of a teapot spout in the side of the press.
