In connection with this belief Dr. Love quotes a terrible story told by M. Petitgand about an Anamite who was beheaded by the sword in 1875 at Sai-

The place of execution was the Plain of Tombs, a vast sandy tract, it is a good thing to note the interest serving as cemetery to the Anamites and the thinese. Four Anamite pirates, taken with their arms in their hands, were to be beheaded. The chief of the band, a man in the prime of life, energetic, muscular, brave without boasting, and firm to the very last, had at tracted my special attention, and I decided to make my observations on him only. Without losing sight of him their more active out-door life a defor a single moment I exchanged a few words in a loud voice with the officer in charge, and noticed that the patient was also looking at me with the liveliest attention. The preparations having been completed, I took my stand at the distance of about two yards from him. He knelt down, but before bending his head he exchanged a rapid look with me.

of about a yard and a quarter from where I stood. It did not roll in the usual way, but stood with the surface of the wound resting on the sand, a position by which the hemorrage was ecidentally reduced to a minimum. At this moment I was terror stricken at seeing the eyes of the doomed man fixed frankly on my eyes. Not daring to believe in a conscious manifes tation, I went quickly to one side of the head lying at my feet, and I found that the eyes followed me. Then I returned to my first position; still the eyes went with me for a short distance and then quitted me quite suddenly. The face expressed at that moment a conscious agony, the agony of a per son in a state of acute asphyxia. The mouth opened violently as if to take in a breath of air, and the head thrown means to be neglected. A mother's rolled over. "Twenty years ago," said the cap-ain, "I was in Tucson. No place was ever worse governed. Outlaws abound d and they did about as they pleased, Finally the good citizens of the place merchants and men of propertydetermined to bring about a reform, and the way they decided to do it was to elect a judge who would deal hon estly with the scalawags who were running the town and corrupting the courts. So they chose a man named 'Charlie' Meyers to be judge. 'Charie was a druggist, who knew nothing about law, but he was perfectly honest, and that was the only qualifiing, indicating, as they do, weakness ingly, 'Charlie' set up a law dispensary in the same building with his drug shop, and dealt out justice and patent medicines with equal grace. In his court he established a library of calf bound books, consisting chiefly of the Materia Medica and Somebody on Fractured Bones. He engaged as an officer of the court a man who was afraid of nothing or nobody—old Jimmy Douglas, who carried in his leg a bullet that he had picked up at Gettys-burg, and who walked with some difficulty and with a peculiar though not graceful limp. The first thing that 'Charlie' did was to establish a chain gang and sentence to various terms in its service every offender that was brought before him. The shyster law who had 'run' the town before 'Charlie's incumbency protested against this as a violation of the constitution of the United States, but they protested in silence. In fact, the pro-test was useless. The process of the judge was rather summary, but the result was very gratifying to the good citizens of Tucson. The wild, rough characters who had ruled the town were now engaged in cleaning the streets, and Tucson was seeing an era of prosperity that it had not known since its foundation.
