Some one informed the Junction Pilot that the Seavey boys catch trout by illegal means. We don't believe it. If they had caught their fish that way they would have been detected years ago. The truth simply is the Seavey boys are expert fishermen, who know every inch of the McKenzie river and who go fearlessly and as an everyday thing to the dangerous rapids where the fish abound. They are welcome to them, and the criticism against them should cease until something more than suspicion points it.

In Memory

Of Minnie Luckey and Albert Wilson, Drowned in the Siuslaw, August 4, 1889.

"Good-bye! you'll never see me more!"
The bright face sweetly smiling said,
And smiled and kissed us at the door,
And none could know the truth was said—
They sailed away upon the tide.
Ah! who can see the need of care
When hearts beat high and hopes are bright,
When hearts are rampant with delight?
They sailed away—Ah fair young form
With wondrous sunny, golden hair,
And eyes so like the heaven's blue,
All thought thee wondrous sweet and fair.
Ah, treacherous waves! Ah, fitful breeze!
Oh, little skiff with sail aloft;
Why can'st thou not sail safely on,
And bear thy burden safe to port?
They clap their hands; they laugh in glee;
Hearts jubilant at every wave;
They do not heed—it cannot be
That death is near and and none can save.
And will he choose these fair ones now?
And is his sickle then so keen
That these sweet flowers that come between
Must wither e'er they're fully blown?
'Tis done! Heaven help the mother now
Whose heart is bleeding for her child.
The reaper needs these flowerets sweet
Though yielded up with anguish wild.
The "bearded grain" will not suffice;
Some dear loved one must come between;
'Twas for the Lord of Paradise
That he has bound them in his sheaves.

THE WILLAMETTE VALLEY.

Joaquin Miller, the Poet of the Sierras Goes through and Tells What He Saw.

The N. Y. Independent of the 8th inst. contains a letter from Joaquin Miller, its traveling correspondent, who recently passed through this valley and stayed a time in Portland. From this letter the following clippings are taken:

I came down the great Willamette valley in a half day by rail from Eugene City, "the heart of Oregon," the place of my last letter. And I came down through one continuous and uninterrupted Eden. Three railroads run down this valley, which is more than one hundred miles long and fifty miles wide; and two railroads cross it, or are crossing it. There is a tremendous building impulse already here, both in city and in country. Little towns blossom all along on either hand; and many a one of these sudden born little towns is destined to serve merely as stations for accommodation trains for many years to come. Still, they all have fine stone houses, and from one to a dozen pretty church spires pointing heavenward through the "continuous woods."

These green woods! Oh, these glorious, restful green woods and green valleys and green hills after the glare of the feveried California sun! This is surely the most restful land the traveler ever saw. The eye rest, the soul and body rest; for beauty and prosperity possesses the land look where you may. One thing about these Oregon towns that make them more than ordinarily beautiful is their abundant greens. You nearly always see two rows of trees on each street. Often some of the streets in the best ordered of these young towns have four rows of trees as on the broad avenues of Washington City.

Another notable feature all up and down this continuous line of restful towns is the school house and the church edifice. At some places you do not see more than about six houses; but one at least, and the biggest and the best, is a school house; and perhaps two of the remaining five buildings are churches. But you do not often find a town so small as that; unless it be of this year's crop of newly planted towns.

JUDGE BONHAM.—Judge Kelsay has shown us a letter from Judge Bonham, consul-general at Calcutta, says the Benton Leader, in which Judge Bonham states that he has sent his resignation of the office to Washington, to take effect as soon as his successor is qualified. Judge Kelsay has been recommended by the Oregon delegation for the office, and if he should be appointed would take Judge Bonham's place this fall. While we should hate to lose so valuable a citizen as Judge Kelsay he would make an excellent counsel-general.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.—Eugene should have are electric lights. The present lights are not sufficient to meet the demands of the public, and should be replaced by a better system. Albany and Salem have the are lights, and the observations of travelers on the trains as they pass those prosperous towns show that towns are guaged to a great extent by their lighting system. Eugene is the best town in the Willamette Valley south of Portland and should make her system of lights perfect.

The building will be 39x80 feet, two stories in height, and will have a handsome bay window and plate glass front. BURGLARIZED.—Burglars entered the residence of Sherwood Burr, through a window in the parlor, left open by accident, sometime last Thursday night. They took from Mr. Burr's vest a gold watch, and $4.50 in silver coin from one of his pantaloon pockets. In the other vest pocket there were $30 in currency, which they overlooked; therefore Mr. Burr is thinking of becoming a greenbacker.
