The Parties Revealed.

Two weeks sgo we published a roman tic story of a tombstome sgent who had luckily fallen into a fortune of nearly $20,000. Now the Albany Herald comes forward and prints the following additional facts: The query has been, where are the real ctors in this remantic episode located, and is there really any truth in the romantic that the location is in Linn county, on the Willamette river a mile below Harrisburg, and the fact as far as the lady endowing the young man with her wealth is concerned is true. A few years ago, an aged and highly respected German citizen, Charles Roth, died, leaving the bulk of his property to his esteemed and true wife, Martha Roth. Left alone at the old homestead, where for years the generous hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Roth has been well known and remembered, especially by the steamboat men, who used to ply spon the river much more than at present, and frequently made the Roth landing a stopping place. Mrs. Roth found her lot very lonely indeed. What wonder, then, that when a young man asked for hospitality at her house, which she had always been scustomed to lavishly bestow, and treated her with such tender regard, that she should wish to retain his eareful attention, and having neither kith nor kin of her own on whom she could bestow her property that she should give it to him to consideration of his care during her lifetims.

The proof of this somewhat remarkable The proof of this somewhat remarkable state of facts is found upon the pressic records of Line county, in July last, wherein Murtha Roth deeded to Egbert C. Lake, of Eugene, her landed property, retaining a life dower in it. If the young man has the stamma of true manhood he will faithfully cherish and care for her as long as she lives, which up to date he seems to have been doing.
