THE EUGENE CITY GUARD. SATURDAY, JAN. 11, 1890.

Real Grit. [Portland Sunday Welcome.] There is nothing in the personal appearance of Miss M. L. Norton, the art instructor in St. Helens' Hall, which would mark her as a woman of nerve, but she is nevertheless. She has just passed through an experience which few women would undertake and none but a genuine heroine would complete.

We learn from the Astoria Transcript that six months ago she filed a pre-emption on a quarter section two and one-half miles from Seaside, built a shake house and lived there alone for six months. The house was in a wild and uninhabitable part of the hills, where bear and panther were plenty. Miss Norton had to carry all her food from Seaside, two and one-half miles distant. Besides the ordinary risks she ran, she was surrounded by a lawless gang of claim jumpers, who endeavored in every way to intimidate her so that they could get her land.

Miss Norton, who is a demi-blonde, of a slight wiry build weighing scarcely 100 pounds, modestly tells the following story of her residence in the wilderness: "A little over six months ago I got the land fever and decided that I was going to have some rest estate in my own name, and I located on a quarter section of Government land near Seaside. The house, which I assisted in building, was made of shakes and located well up in the mountains, in a country well timbered and very wild. I had to carry all my provisions from Seaside, two and one-half miles distant, and a good part of the narrow trail was through heavily timbered gulches. I lived there alone the whole six months, cultivating my land myself, and building what fence it required by the pre-emption laws.

The nights were made hideous by the howls of bears and panthers, and many a time they nearly scared the life out of me. I wasn't nearly so much afraid of them as I was of those terrible claim jumpers who wanted to get my claim. They made all kinds of threats even against my life in order to drive me off my land. When on my way to and from Seaside I often met some of them on the trail. But I never let them think for a moment that I was afraid. I faced them without a tremor when almost fainting from fright. They used to prod around my cabin nights yelling and firing off their pistols. I finally bought a six-shooter, and made up my mind that if they attempted to carry out any of their threats I would use it.

Their persecutions continued to the last and when I was ready to make my final proof, they got my witnesses drunk and kept them in that condition three or four days. I had to go to additional expense to get more witnesses. I finally proved up, though, and I think I will get my land without any more trouble.

It was a rough experience for me as I am not used to mountaineering, and if I had known at the outset what I would have to endure I doubt if I would have taken up the land.

County Clerk Trenehard says that her last witnesses were all the law requires, and that the little lady will in all probability get her claim.

Early Morse Telegraph. [St. Paul Globe.] Olate Searle sat in his office yesterday discussing many interesting topics in his usual interesting way. A card was lying on his desk, on which appeared the word "Budstikken" the name of a Scandinavian newspaper. Mr. Searle was asked what the word meant. He replied: "It is a Norwegian word, 1200 years old at least. In those days when the coasts of Norway were ravaged by pirates the inhabitants had to resort to all kinds of devices to warn those at a distance of the approach of these piratical craft. When one was seen on the horizon a man went up to the top of a high mountain, where he lighted a beacon fire. This could be seen for a long distance, and was known to be a warning. When it was seen in the distance another fire was lighted on another hill, until all over the country fires blazed from every hill top and the people prepared to defend themselves.

They also had a system of messengers. The man who first sighted the sail would take an arrow and send it to his neighbors. From town to town this arrow was sent until all were warned. These were rather primitive ways of telegraphing, but were so effective that in the course of twenty-four hours all Norway knew of the approach of pirates. This system of spreading the news was called "budstikken," and the name is extensively used as a name for newspapers in the old country."

A Bogus Marriage. There is a case in Pendleton which is attracting considerable attention among those acquainted with the particulars. It is briefly outlined as follows: The name of the man is Frank Coon; the name of the young lady is omitted out of consideration for her and her relatives and friends: Frank Coon, who previous to his escapade bore a good reputation, wooed and won the affections of the young girl and was very attentive to her on all occasions. According to the East Oregonian, after quite a protracted courtship, the couple left Pendleton suddenly and went to Adams, or some other town in the East End, and were married by a justice of the peace, according to the story of shortly.

According to the East Oregonian, after quite a protracted courtship, the couple left Pendleton suddenly and went to Adams, or some other town in the East End, and were married by a justice of the peace, according to the story of shortly.

Shortly after their return to Pendleton the groom left for Portland, where he has relatives. He promised to come back again and take his bride home. This he failed to do, and it is feared he has deserted her, that fear being strengthened by the fact that a search of the records shows that no license was issued to the parties, and the marriage therefore was a bogus one.

How is induced a justice of the peace to perform the marriage without a license is a mystery, and it is doubtful if the ceremony was performed.

The Victoria sailors employed on sealing schooners are on a strike. They want $30 per month and 25 cents for each seal caught. The owners refuse to grant this demand, and say they can get plenty of men in San Francisco for $25 per month, and will do so.

Results of Small Savings.

The following shows how easy it is to accumulate a fortune, provided proper steps are taken. The table shows what would be the result at the end of fifty years by saving a certain amount each day and putting it at interest at the rate of 6 per cent.

Daily savings. The result. One cent.....$ 950

Ten cents.....9,504

Twenty cents.....19,008

Thirty cents.....28,512

Forty cents.....38,016

Fifty cents.....47,520

Sixty cents.....57,024

Seventy cents.....66,528

Eighty cents.....76,032

Ninety cents.....85,536

One dollar.....95,040

Five dollars.....475,200

Nearly every person wastes enough in twenty or thirty years, which if saved and carefully invested would make a family independent; but the principle of small savings has lost sight of in the general desire to become wealthy.

The Kentucky University has opened its doors to female students, and now the names of twenty young women are entered upon its rolls.

TIMBER LAND NOTICE. United States Land Office, Roseburg, Or., Nov. 12, 1889.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington Territory," G. W. McPeters, of Seattle, County of King, State of Washington, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 10, for the purchase of the S. 1/2 of Sec. 26, T. 16 S., R. 1 E., and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office at Roseburg, Or., on Wednesday, the 12th day of March, 1890.

He names as witnesses: H. N. Shaw, of Crawfordville, Or.; E. R. Crane, of Eugene, Or.; J. C. Reed, of Livingston, Montana; and S. M. Cowan, of Seaside, Wash.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 12th day of March, 1890.
