THE WINTER SUNRISE.

It Charms the Beholder in Later Life as in the Earliest Childhood. Some of the finest effects of brilliant colors at sunrise are seen in our Northern winter. At least they are witnessed by more people -for the June sunrise comes along at such an unreasonable early hour, that only those who have fallen into the practice of rising with the sun, if not before, ever see that exbibition. But in these winter days, when the sungets into his most laggard habit of late rising, one may study at Australian ballot bill. his leisure (provided his view is not cut off by clustering intervening roofs and towers) the gorgeous cloud scenery that neralds the coming luminary. Of course he must have a bed-room window which, like the prophet Daniel's, looks toward Jerusalem; no side-squint nor half view will do any justice to the subject. Such a sunrise as Turner would have enjoyed to paint may frequently be seen this present winter. Mixed a little with the abounding dark and wet mornings, these brilliant day-openers are all the more delightful. There was such a surprise this morning, not, perhaps, a specially noteworthy color display, compared with some of the others, but a splendid exhibition nevertheless. It was pleasant to note the growing illumination-to see it reported to have performed a remarkable surgical operation. Two patients were simultaneously brought to him for operations, one requiring amputation of the thigh at the hip joint, the other needing a portion of the humerus removed on account of the bone being extensively diseased. The first operation was the amputation, and then the surgeon proceeded to excise the diseased portion of the humerus. This made a gap in the bone, but a piece of the thigh bone was taken from the limb which had just been amputated and fixed in the gap, by which the continuity of the humerus was completely restored. Perfect union took place, and the patient
