It being the day for the regular meeting of the Upper Willamette Lumbering Asso-ciation the firm, which sells more saw mill machinery than any other two firms in Oregon, had an opportunity to meet their friends and patrons in a social report.

Staver & Walker by fair dealing, courte ous treatment and reasonable prices have worked up a good trade in this section and have gained the confidence and esteem of all with whom they have had dealings. Their machinery, vehicles, and everything they carry in siock, are well known for their tability and superior quality of manufacturity and superior quality of manufacturity. stability and superior quality of manufac-ture. They handle the Chandler & Taylor saw mills, engines and boilers, and the just-ly celebrated J I Case traction engines, ly celebrated J I Case traction engines, threshers, saw mills, etc. During the past few weeks they have sold a great deal of saw mill machinery to parties in Lane county, and are daily shipping new machinery and vehicles to this city, which is sufficient proof that their goods are entirely satisfatory. They cerry a very large stock and are thus enabled to fill orders promptly, causing no discouraging delays after orders are sent in. Farmers and others who desire anything in their line can do no better than to buy of them. All are invited to call on their local agent, A P Churchill, at his warehouse on 8th street, between Willamette and Olive, and inspect his stock and learn prices. stock and learn prices.

Sewerage Advice.

The City Council employed W. S. Chapman, a civil engineer of Portland and now holding the position of superintendent of streets of that city, to come to Engene look over the town and give his advice concern-ing the best available scheme for constructing a system of sewerage. A meeting of citizens was called Saturday evening to hear the report of Mr. Chapman.

He stated that there were two lines that could be used. One through Willamette street to empty into the river below Skinner's butte, the other to empty into the river above the butte and below the flouring He estimated that the cost of the latter system would be $25,000 to $30,000 and the first named $28,000 additional. He favored emptying the sewer above the butte commencing at the tail race near the river with a five or six foot sewer built of hard brick and cement, egg shaped, running thence to Sixth and Willamette streets where it could be contracted, thence to Fifteenth street where it would be seven to eight feet below the grade. A pipe line two feet in diameter to be run west on Sixth street to Lincoln with a couple of side connections of small pipe, one from the north and the other from the south. Also an eighteen inch pipe ou Ninth or Tenth street to connect with the main sewer and tap the mill race thus securing abundance of water for flushing purposes. The bottom of the sewer would commence at low water mark and would have sufficient fall to provide the town with good sewerage. High water would not interfere as the constant pressure lines clear. If economy was desired the sewer could be stopped for the present at Tenth street. The southeastern part of town could get good sewerage by running a

The class in Optics have been both instructed and entertained by a series of experiments the past week. The class in Geology greatly enjoyed the lecture on the submerged kingdom of At-lantis given by Prof. Condon.

A certain class thinks: How pleasant it is to be forgot When the hour hand points to eight o'clock. The seniors think that tender care and loving glances are as essential to the growth of their class tree as the showers of spring. The Zoology class have committed more than a hundred names. As well as gaining valuable information the study affords a fine

The young ladies of the freshman class are requested to meet at Mr. Friendley's Saturday at 6:30. Important business on hand. Do not forget. Several students on approaching Villard Hall between 9 and 10 o'clock wondered from what two seniors "came those sbricks the air. The young ladies of the senior class en joyed a very pleasant boating party last Fri-day evening. Agness proved herself to be an expert oars-woman in "pulling" all the way down stream.

Numero et Pondere Vincinus--the gross weight of the class of '90 is computed to be 2094 lbs. We do not know whether it is Troy weight or Avoirdupois, but presume it must be Troy. Some time ago the Faculty gave the young ladies the privilege of using the gymnasium Friday afternoons. Since that time very few of the young ladies have used it. If we do not intend to profit by our advantages, we suggest that we give them up to others who will. Let us not be like the dog in the manger. Several parties of students who have been boating during the past two weeks report finding a singular zoological specimen in the mill race opposite and just above the quarry. Careful analysis has shown that it is the Equus mortuus. It seems as if it is almost time for the health authorities to remove the class-tree orator, choose a motto, and transact other important business. The oratorical honors were unanimously bestowed upon E. H. McAlister. The motto proved to be a difficult question, but the sentence, Piese quam honors persequimus, was finally adopted by a two-thirds vote. A choice collection of taffy, oranges. The seniors met last Saturday to select a by a two-thirds vote. A choice collection of taffy, oranges, peanuts, pon-corn.conglomer-ste, etc., was afterward discussed. We will not attempt to enumerate the number of baskets of fragments which were gathered up, but suffice it to say that they were very generously (?) donated by aforesaid class to the sophomores in return for past courtesies.

Some one has said that "each one's world is what he knows," and surely the educated man does have a larger sphere and a more complete one than the ignorant man. To him each tiny flower and sparkling alew drop affords subject for thought. To him music is ewseter, and life is deeper than to the uneducated man. He has a broader influence—and in fine is a man in the highest sense of the word. But book-learning is not always education. One may apend much time in reading or pretending to read, and yet fail to educate himself. Education means thought, meditation and work. It means increased powers, acute faculties and developed capabilities. It is possible, and also too often true, that the college graduate is not educated, and this of no fault of the instructors, but, because he has failed to work out his way. Self reliance and originality are indispensable to the student. Because so many waste their time and graduate with low standing many business men say colleges are a failure. And to us, fellow students, it is left to prove that they are not a failure. Can we prove their success? A certain black hat, awaiting its doorn Lay on the counter in Prof. Condon's room; Along came Anna from the Zoology class Who spied the hat as she passed.

She took the hat, with utmost care.

And paced through the hall to the post in the stair;

With a move so shy, and with care utmost. She placed the hat on the baniator post. A certain young man to the counter came, But the hat had vanished from the same; He paced through the hall and to his su
