

THE EUGENE CITY GUARD.

SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1890.

The State Election.

Returns received from the State indicate that Sylvester Penoyer is elected by over 5,000 majority.

Discontented Labor.

Our high protectionist law-makers have for years been talking about "protection of American labor," and have been diligently laying on high and higher duties to accomplish that end.

A Petty Swindle.

One of the most swindlers of his size in the McKinley tariff bill is the proposed duty on printers' and paper makers' felt or blankets.

Election News.

Marion gives Thompson 17 majority. Linn county elects the entire Democratic county ticket.

Land for Settlers.

There is but little vacant land in the county yet two-thirds of it is but slightly improved or consists of timber lands or portions not suitable for cultivation.

City Industries.

It now supports eight general merchandise stores with large stocks, three hardware and implement stores, or three implement agencies, five drug stores, ten grocery stores, three furniture stores, five blacksmith shops, three harness shops, three weekly newspapers, three stove and tin stores, three book stores, three banks, three ladies' bazaars or military stores, three jewelry stores, two sportsmen and gun stores, three boot and shoe stores, two large brick hotels, several boarding houses, four barber shops, three restaurants and bakeries, one cigar factory, three variety stores, five saloons, two marble shops, two planing-mills, sash and door factory, flouring mill, one furniture factory, two tanneries, one foundry and machine shop, two lumber yards, two breweries, with a large number of smaller shops and offices.

The Stricken City.

A Johnston, Pa., dispatch of May 31 says: The anniversary of the flood was observed to-day. There was a general draping of business houses in black.

Freight Facilities.

The cost of living is comparatively cheap, and the taxes upon property the lowest of any city of its size in the State. It has its streets and sidewalks in good condition, public improvements are pushed, yet the city has no debt, but money in the Treasury.

EUGENE AND LANE COUNTY.

The Examiner Describes the Town and Country—Their Attractions and Resources Worthily Described.

There is no richer, finer district in all the Northwest than Lane county, Oregon, and no pleasanter nor more comfortable place in the whole world than its county seat, Eugene City.

There has never been a backward movement in this district since its first settlers wrested from the Indians their magnificent hunting grounds. There is nothing false or faulty in this whole structure of Lane county's progress; nothing that can give way and let it down or collapse.

Another factor that insures Eugene against any considerable period of adversity is the fact that her factories market their produce all over the world. With her magnificent water power she can produce as cheaply as required anywhere.

It must not be supposed that Eugene's business men are slow and not alive to the spirit of the time. On the contrary, it would be hard to find a set of men who are more enterprising when the occasion justifies it.

Lane county was named in honor of General Joseph Lane, of pioneer fame, and by reference to a map will be seen to occupy a central position in that portion of the state known as Western Oregon.

The ordinary amount of wheat is twenty-five bushels per acre, oats seventy bushels, barley sixty bushels, potatoes 500 bushels, hops 1,500 or 2,000 pounds per acre.

The city of Eugene is pleasantly situated near the center of the county, and on the left bank of the Willamette river, at the head of navigation. It has a population at present of about 4,000, and is rapidly improving.

There is no other city in the county, and on the left bank of the Willamette river, at the head of navigation. It has a population at present of about 4,000, and is rapidly improving.

which traverses both sides of the Willamette valley will be extended to Eugene, giving active competition in railway freights, to sides which the Sinclair and Eastern Railway and Navigation Company have made preliminary surveys, and are now engaged in arranging for the survey, and the building of a line from the harbor at the mouth of the Sinclair river in the western part of the county, via Eugene, across the Cascade mountains to Eastern connections.

The attention of capital has naturally been attracted to the field offered for investment, especially in factories for the conversion of raw materials, in which the county abounds, into marketable goods ready for the use of the world, and the home industry alone offers a safe investment and sure return.

These are only a few of the most important openings for investment of capital and energy. Almost any line of manufacturing that can be followed on the Coast can be made perfectly successful here, as power is abundant, raw material cheap, fuel plenty and cheap and labor as reliable as any point on the Pacific Coast. Crops never fail in Oregon.

The soil and climate of the Sunset land are not excelled by the attractions of any other part of the world. The people of Eugene and of Lane county are industriously working out the problems of their own prosperity, and have no need to invite the aid of others to insure their ultimate success.

The climate is simply perfect. There are absolutely no extremes. This is caused by the Japan current which flows from the South Pacific ocean to the north and setting in upon the northern coast of California rushing northward as far as British Columbia and modifying the climate of the North Pacific coast in the same manner that the Atlantic Gulf stream tempers the climate of Great Britain and Ireland.

There are no swamps of tide lands to cause any unhealthfulness, consequently it is most healthy for consumptive and asthmatic troubles. The residents of this section are likewise exempt from the curses of fever and ague and rheumatism.

The rivers hereabout teem with trout, and the woods are alive with quail and grouse. A little further back among the mountains there is the biggest game the most enthusiastic sportsman could wish for.
