The First Census.

"Speaking of the census," said Jason Wheeler to one of the census enumerators the other day "I carried me between the days of '42. I took the first census of Lane county; it was in 1818. The county was all the territory from the Santiam river to the California line and it took me just a little over a month to do the work. There were at that time in the county 963 people, 369 of whom were legal voters. In the Eugene river valley I found a man, a Mr. Welch, with a wife and two children; the next family I found of three lived in the forks of the Willamette river and the next was Mr. Spores at Spores ferry, where I think he or his family still reside."—Albany Herald.

Mr. Wheeler's recollection must be at fault when he places only one settler between Spores and Eugene river in the fall of 1817. Eugene Skinner, Isaac Briggs, Elias Briggs, Prior Blair, Charles Martin, Cornelius Hills, Renj. Davis, A. and Louis Corryell, H. Noble and possibly several others settled in Lane county south of Spores, while during the spring and summer of 1818 a considerable immigration settled in the county.

Railway News.

Colonel Fred Crocker, first vice-president of the Southern Pacific railroad, arrived in Portland Monday accompanied by General Superintendent Fillmore.

Col. Crocker says that he was enabled to grant himself a long promised tour of inspection of the Oregon lines of system in connection with the annual meetings of the terminal company and P. and W. V. directors.

"What we saw on the East side road coming up," said he, "was very satisfactory. The country is very promising both for farming and lumbering. There are about the first of July we shall put on another local train out of Portland, running as far south as Roseburg. The other locals may then go only as far as Albany, but that has not been settled yet. Two locals will thus relieve our through train of its present heavy strain, as we will carry no local passengers on it. The rail between here and San Francisco is rapidly on an increase and it is our purpose to improve service and shorten time."

The Increased Vote.

Lane county may be excused for congratulating herself upon the increased vote cast at the recent election. It is an evidence of her rapidly increasing prosperity. 751 more votes were cast in 1890 than in 1888. We give a list showing the vote of the county on the state ticket for five past elections:

Table with 2 columns: Year and Total Votes. 1882: 2,222; 1884: 2,748; 1886: 2,942; 1888: 3,693.

Lane county retains her place as fourth in the list of the counties of Oregon. We give a few of the others for comparison, the vote being in parentheses: Multnomah, 12,892; Marion, 4,637; Linn, 4,009; Union, 3,670; Umatilla, 3,411; Douglas, 2,938; Clackamas, 2,935; Jackson, 2,825; Yamhill, 2,478; Clatsop, 2,400; Washington, 2,475.
