A Substantial Increase.

The census returns of the counties and towns of Western Oregon show that Eugene and Lane county have taken a front rank in growth during the last decade. Eagene by the returns is given a tion of 3,958. In 1880 the population wa 1117, so the increase has been 2,841 The percentage of increase of the towns is as follows: East Portland, 257; Eugene, 254; Portland, 169; Astoria, 152; the Salem precincts, 117.

Among the counties Lane stands fourth in regard to gains, showing an increase of 5,682. It will be observed that just onehalf of the gain of the county in population must be credited to Eugene.

A very pointed object lesson is fornished by the town of Lebanon on the subject of home manufacturing. During the present summer there have been shipped from that place 110 tons of chittin bark, for which $75 per ton was realized, making the anug sum of $8,250. This bark was gathered in the neighboring woods, and of course cost nothing but the time consumed in gathering it. The bark is sent east to manufacturing chemists, where the product is placed on the market in the shape of medicines which are estimated to be worth $725 for each ton of bark used, or a total of about $80,600. The estimated to be worth $725 for each ton of bark used, or a total of about $80,000. The difference between the amount paid out for raw material, and the amount realized from the manufactured product represents a loss to Oregon of fully ninety per cent. In other words, we are paid $8,000 for materials which the eastern manufacturer sells for $80,000. Is it possible there is any one so dense as to claim that manufacturing in Oregon will not pay? This is but one of hundreds of instances wherein Oregon lesses the larger proportion of the profit on her productions, and all for the lack of the requisite tions, and all for the lack of the requisite enterprise in manufacturing the abundant materials at her command.
