Archbishop Gross delivered some very interesting sermons Saturday and Sunday at the Catholic church to large and appreciative audiences. The editor of the Portland Reform Journal was in Eugene recently and in a short article wrote of the town did it an injustice, although we think it unintentional. He says: "Eugene is a pretty place of about 4000 people, situated almost at the head of the great Willamette valley, 123 miles from Portland. The town has all modern conveniences; the state university is here; eight or ten church edifices, too; and three very fine looking bank buildings. To look at the place a person would think there was great prosperity. After talking with some of the merchants and laboring men we found unfavorable reports. Several of the merchants claim to be closing out business, having their red flags out indicating closing out sales. One of the oldest firms in town told us they were winding up their business as fast as possible. The laboring men claim that there is little to do in season. Of course this condition is not confined to Eugene; Albany, Salem and other valley towns are about the same. And this condition is not confined to the valley towns alone, but it prevails everywhere."

Only one firm in Eugene is closing out and that not on account of a poor business as they have done a good business for years. The red flags seen by the editor of the Reform Journal were probably the ones used by the merchants to call delivery wagon. The merchants of Eugene have larger stocks and have done a better business than that met in any other town. The news in Eugene has been experienced and laboring men have not been idle except from their own choice. (Since the above was in type, one of the members of the firm above alluded to, McClung & Johnson, has concluded to continue the business.)

To the Public. Having purchased the interest of A. J. Johnson in the firm of McClung & Johnson, I shall continue business at the old stand. I shall continue to sell the present stock at cost. The business will be conducted on the cash basis. All persons wishing goods cheap will find this the place to trade. We invite an inspection of our goods and prices. J. H. McCLUNG.

ATTEMPTED INDEMNITY.—Some person last Thursday morning at 12:30 o'clock attempted to burn the residence belonging to Wm. Withrow, situated on the corner of Washington and Seventh streets. Luckily Thos. Jenkins, who lives next door, discovered the fire in its incipient stage and gave an alarm, and with the aid of neighbors succeeded in extinguishing the flames before they had communicated to the building. It appears the party had laid a sack of straw under the porch, and with coal oil under the porch and set the same on fire. Hanging is too good for any man making such an attempt.

LANE COUNTY MORTALITY.—Portland Reform Journal: Mrs. V. S. McClure has kept an account of the deaths occurring in Lane county, during the year 1890, up to Nov. 10, taken from the county papers and has a list of 97, 13 of whom were over 50 years of age, and the oldest was 90 years. Four committed suicide, four drowned, and one died of cholera. The most interesting cases were those of a man who perished in a fire, and a woman who died of cholera.

Her husband, who is 85 years old, and several sons and daughters survive her.

KNOCKED OUT BY ELECTRICITY.—Wednesday morning while the butcher who works for Fisher & Watkins in their market was turning on the electric lights in their cutting room, he accidentally touched the metal about the shade and was immediately knocked down. It appears that the floor he was standing on was covered with salt and water, which made a conductor for the electric fluid. Hereafter he will be more careful.

A Tramp Accident. A tramp came to Nightwatcher Friday night just after the overland train had passed south, and asked for medical services and lodging. A sympathetic employe at the depot had bound him up in cloths, such as the Israelites used to bind up Jacob, and he was sent to the hospital. His story was that in company with several other tramps, he had deserted the traditional blind baggage on the front of the train and took refuge on the roof of one of the coaches. He claimed that one of his companions pushed him off as the train was approaching Eugene, and by the fall caused the injury to his head and hand. Dr. Arthur helped the sufferer with several stitches, and on Friday he went on his way rejoicing.

UNIVERSITY JOURNAL.—The project of publishing a monthly educational journal in the interest of the University of Oregon is being considered by the Laurean and Estaxian societies. We are informed that if the Faculty and Regents approve of the venture, its publication will be commenced. The University should certainly be represented by a suitable educational publication, and the Regents should give substantial aid so that the venture could not fail on account of financial reasons. This is an advertising age and no college, business or other enterprise can rest unimpeded and expect to prosper when no means are taken to inform the public of the advantages offered. By all means publish a journal and make it a good one.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.—Tuesday morning, H. D. Miller and his father-in-law, Mr. Kirby, who reside on Fifth street, met with a very lively runaway while hauling wood from the river bottom about a mile north of the Eugene bridge. Mr. Miller dropped the lines to light his pipe when the horses became frightened and ran off. Mr. Kirby was thrown on a barb wire fence and Mr. Kirby on the ground. Both sustained severe bruises but will recover.

THE SPRINGFIELD BRIDGE.—The iron work on the magnificent bridge that spans the river at Springfield was practically completed Thursday. At that time the immense amount of iron, aggregating about 130 tons, had been placed in position and workmen with wrenches were tightening the nuts that lifted the span of four hundred feet from the false work on which it had reposed from the time construction had commenced.

OLIVETTE.—The comic opera, Olivette, was produced at Rhinehart's Theatre, Friday and Saturday evenings of last week by a company of Eugene amateurs under the management of Mrs. J. B. Hazen and Miss Emma Doris. The opera was well placed on the stage and was creditable to the managers and those taking parts. Good audiences witnessed the renditions of the opera.

GOOD STREET WORK.—The grading and graveling of the streets leading to the Eugene bridge are progressing rapidly, less than two blocks remaining unfinished. The work will prove permanent and will be a splendid addition to the large list of excellent streets in Eugene. Mr. Simon, the contractor, puts on over 100 cubic yards of gravel per day.

ALBUM LOST.—While Wm. Miller was moving from his farm 6 miles below here on the river road, to Eugene, last Monday, a plush album was lost from the wagon. No name in it. The family value it for the pictures it contains. A reward will be paid for its return to Mr. Miller or the Grand office.

Merchant's Carnival.

The most popular entertainment ever given in Eugene was held this week under the auspices of the Women's Relief Corps, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The business men and firms were represented by handsome young ladies, appropriately attired, bearing on their dress and banners the names of those whom they represented. As each came on the stage Mrs. Saml. Nelson in appropriate poetry called attention to the firm whose goods and business were brought to the attention of the public. Mrs. Nelson understood her business and made many local mentions that met with prolonged applause.

The musical and literary talent contributed their aid and won merited applause for their talented production. The drills, under the direction of Capt. Shadden, were handsomely executed, and formed one of the most pleasing features of the entertainment. Standing room was at a premium both nights, and the ladies of the Relief Corps, as they deserved, added substantial wealth to their treasury.

About seventy firms were represented, showing the extent and enterprise of the business men of Eugene. Work was required to accomplish the end, and while credit is due to all the managers, on whom fell the burden, are to be congratulated on the success attending the Merchant's Carnival. To Messrs. J.
