HALAXY, Or., Aug 3, 1890.

An old soldier's story: In the late war I was a soldier in the First Maryland Volunteers, Company G. During my term of service I contracted chronic diarrhoea, since then I have used a great amount of medicine, but when I found any that would give me relief they would injure my stomach, until Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy was brought to my notice. I use it and will say it is the only remedy that gave me permanent relief and no bad results follow. I take pleasure in recommending this preparation to all my old comrades, who, while giving their services to their country, contracted this dreadful disease as I did, from eating unwholesome and uncooked food. Yours truly, A. E. Bending, Halaxey, Or. For sale by F. M. Wilkins.

The Salem Statesman thus dresses down

Rev. C. C. Stratton, President of the Willamette University:

It turns out that the person who has kicked up all of this row about the removal of the Willamette university is the man whom the local committee picked up out of the mud and mire and dirt in California and put in a position of honor and decency—this man, who, when he arrived in Salem, publicly proclaimed his loyalty to the city and his gratitude to the people here who had reposed such confidence in him after such an ordeal—this is the man who has turned traitor to Salem, where he said he expected to live and die among pleasant memories and honored associations. The confidence in him was misplaced. What personal profit will accrue to this man for his treachery, let those who are better acquainted with the facts say. But he has not been honest with Salem. He has professed friendship and at the same time totally ignored her claims—repudiated her record in the past, and worked solely and only for a Portland wild-cat real estate deal. If it is necessary, in order for Salem to get rid of this man, to let the Willamette university go, why, by all means, let it go. But better for the school, out this traitorous visionary from its charge, and let it remain where it belongs.

Birchall, who was hanged recently in Canada, warned all young men, when upon the scaffold, to keep out of debt. While a student at Oxford the temptation for running into debt was so great that he couldn't resist it. It was the beginning of his sad ending. It should also be a warning to business men, who are constantly pestered with drummers soliciting orders who are as persuasive as the snake upon the tree, which caused Mother Eve and all her posterity to fall, and needed a redeemer. Many drummers with glib tongues have been and are still the ruin of many a good man, who orders more than he needs, because it is such an easy task and he loves to be obliging; but beware of all such seductive snares. Keep out of debt, is an injunction, which, by rights, should have been embodied into the ten commandments.

Sitting Bull Killed.

Instead of the triumphant advent of a messiah, the result of the ghost dance crusade thus far has been the death of the nearest approach to a messiah that the Indians have had—the wily old medicine man, Sitting Bull. A force of Indian police from the Pine Ridge agency were sent out to arrest Sitting Bull, who was encouraging the hostile spirit of the Sioux. They captured him Monday morning at daylight.

The following press dispatch tells the story: St. Paul, December 15.—A dispatch received late to-night by the Pioneer Press about to-day's fight says that when the Indian police reached camp they found the Indians ready to march. The ponies were painted and many of the savages had stripped for war. The police made a dash into camp and seized Sitting Bull. They were on their way back to Standing Rock when a son of the famous chief urged his comrades to recapture the old man. The women and children were left in the bushes, and then with yells the hostiles charged upon the police, firing as they came. A hand-to-hand struggle ensued, during which Sitting Bull, who was not shackled, gave his orders in a loud voice. For several minutes the firing was heavy and deadly. In the fusillade Sitting Bull fell out of his saddle, pierced by a bullet, but it is not known whether it was fired by the charging party or by one of the police. The son of Sitting Bull was slain almost at the first volley of the police. The hostiles fired with great accuracy and slowly drove the police from the field. If the cavalry had not come up at this time it is probable the force would have been annihilated. The soldiers were quick to enter into action. A skirmish line was thrown out, and then kneeling and firing as they advanced, the troops with machine guns playing over their heads poured a withering fire into the savages. Sitting Bull's body, which had been abandoned by the police, as well as that of his son, was taken to the fort. After the fight was over the followers of the dead chief struck out for the Bad Lands.

Sitting Bull was born about 1827. He was the principal chief of the Dakota Sioux, and took up arms against the whites and friendly Indians, refusing to be taken to the Indian territory. In June, 1876, they defeated and massacred General George A. Custer's advance party of General Alfred H. Terry's column which had been sent against them, on Little Big Horn river, and were pursued northward by General Terry. While Sitting Bull did not take an active fighting part in this massacre, the actual commander being Chief Crazy Horse, he was in the tent at the time and organized and contrived the whole campaign. Sitting Bull with a part of his band, made his escape into British territory, and through the mediation of the Dominion officials, surrendered on a promise of pardon in 1880. Since that time he has lived on the Sioux reservation in Indian territory. When the Messiah craze first broke out it was not thought that Sitting Bull was mixed up in it, but subsequent events proved that the old fellow was at the bottom of the whole affair. After the troops arrived about Pine Ridge and Rosebud agencies, Sitting Bull moved his camp farther away, and has persistently refused to meet the agents or army officers with the exception of one council held with Agent McLaughlin at which no satisfactory answers could be obtained from him. Orders were issued for his arrest a few weeks ago, but the orders were countermanded at the time of Buffalo Bill's visit.

Powerful Vessels.

The new protected first-class British cruiser Edgar, recently launched at the Davenport dockyard, is one of the nine vessels of the same class being constructed at various public and private yards in Britain. The Edgar is a vessel of 7350 tons and 12,000 horse-power, her cost being £330,000 for hull, equipment, machinery, and armament. She is expected to make twenty knots and will be equipped with twelve breech-loading and other guns of the newest type. She has an exceptionally strong protective deck extending over her whole length, and will be protected from torpedo attacks by a complete net defense embodying all the latest improvements. The Pirate, which the Cramps are to construct for our navy, Secretary Tracy declares will be the fastest in the world; her great length, immense size, and consequent ability to maintain speed regardless of heavy seas, it is estimated will give her, with her 22,000 horse power engines, a continuous steaming power of twenty-two knots an hour, and the ability to make a sport of twenty-four knots an hour in an emergency. The Pirate is the vessel that is to be provided with three screws, and with engines of almost double the capacity of the Edgar's would soon be able to overhaul or distance the British vessel.

High and Exclusive License.

A Pendleton man wants to corner the saloon business at that place, as the following from the East Oregonian would indicate: A gentleman, with a speculative mind, says that he is willing to give $30,000 cash annually, payable $2500 monthly, for the privilege of selling spirituous liquors in Pendleton. He would agree to run only a first-class institution, keep an orderly house, have no gambling around it, sell no liquor to minors or allow them on the premises. He further suggests that the council can grant the privilege by raising the license from $300, the cost of the license now, to $30,000 per annum. This is a novel proposition and there is considerable virtue in it. Undoubtedly it would be the means of putting an end to considerable gambling in Pendleton indulged in by both men and boys at the present time who should be at something else. It would also do away with a large number of tough characters who are at present making a living by nefarious manipulations. The "tin horns," too, would have to seek pastures new, and relieve Pendleton taxpayers of a considerable burden.

Problem Solved.

Mrs. O'Shea was the solution. Attractive, educated alike in art, literature and politics; of an old and wealthy family. Reared in opulence; surrounded by the aroma of love and admiration. Married to the profligate who after squandering a fortune took pains to diminish hers. Neglected by the man she loved, burdened with the weight of her sorrow; anxious to alienate her mind from the grief of domestic life, she threw her heart into the cause of the Irish leader, and with the eye of love mistook the man for the cause. She became infatuated. It was reciprocal, and thus is the fatal drama of Dermot MacMurrough and Derworgill repeated. Modified only to weave a garland of romance over the political bier of a greater man.—Catholic Sentinel.

Koch's Lymph for Hospitals.

A Berlin dispatch, of Dec. 20, says: Professor Koch paid a long visit to the American Minister Phelps yesterday. Koch said his decision to endorse for the lymph only to hospitals was due to reports of fatal results that followed its use in private practice. He carefully added that he was not personally cognizant of any death resulting from its effects, but was convinced that the lymph was dangerous, except when used under constant watch of physicians. The patient, he said, ought to be seen at least every two hours. He declares it is useless for American doctors to come to Berlin. The lymph will be assigned to American hospitals that are properly watched for. Sick Americans should stay at home. Berlin
