

Making New Places.

A Washington special of late date tells how the people's money is being squandered. While the people are complaining of hard time it is of importance to note the action of the g. o. p., through its representatives during the first session of the present congress. In the senate thirty-seven new places were created, in order to let that number of ward workers get into the treasury. These thirty-seven places carry an annual expenditure of $33,684. Four new places were made in the house, with an annual expenditure of $9,226. In the library of congress one place was created at an annual cost of $12,000. Two new places were made at the White House at an annual expense of $3,400. One new place in the department of state carries an expenditure of $2,000. In the treasury department 109 new places were made at an annual cost to the people of $110,000. Included in this is the new assistant secretary of the treasury at a salary of $4,500 per annum. Five new places were made at the sub-treasurer in New York at an annual expense of $6,000. Eleven new places were made in the territories; annual cost, $25,350. In the war department, twenty-five years after the war closed, 179 new places were created at an annual cost of $197,120. Nine new places were created in the navy department; annual cost, $15,550. In the department of the interior 499 soft places are made at an annual cost of $509,830. In the department of justice under Attorney Gen. W. H. Miller six new places were created at an annual expense of $11,180. Five new places have been made in the department of labor under this administration at an annual cost of $7,320. In the department of agriculture under the management of Hask, 63 new places have been created at an annual cost of $82,220. In the District of Columbia under Harrison 148 new places have been created which are costing the people $111,810 per annum. In other branches of the government, service 540 new places have been created, making in all 1354 new places in the government service that have been created and filled by Harrison's administration. These places have been created in the great part to make room for party workers, and not in the interest of economy and reform. These 1,354 places cost the people annually $1,450,348. Not satisfied with this, this administration has increased the salaries of 1,108 office-holders, the total amount of such increase amounting each year to $141,256.12 over the salaries paid under Cleveland's administration for the same work done.

The Farmers Alliance.

The official enumeration of the number of members of the National Farmers' Alliance—the organization which recently held a convention at Ocala, Fla.—was undertaken last July and the results at that time were as follows: Maryland, 5,000; Nebraska, 65,000; Virginia, 20,000; Minnesota, 50,000; N. Carolina, 100,000; Alabama, 75,000; S. Carolina, 100,000; Mississippi, 60,000; Georgia, 100,000; Louisiana, 20,000; Florida, 20,000; Texas, 150,000; S. Dakota, 20,000; Kentucky, 80,000; N. Dakota, 40,000; New Mexico, 5,000; Indiana, 5,000; Colorado, 5,000; Illinois, 2,000; West Virginia, 2,000; Arkansas, 10,000; Pennsylvania, 500; Missouri, 150,000. Total, 1,269,500.

At that time the Alliances in New York, New Jersey, California and Ohio were not yet fully organized, but their membership was roughly estimated as follows: New York, 500; New Jersey, 500; California, 1,000; Ohio, 300.

The National Alliance has elected its candidates for governor in Georgia, South Carolina and Tennessee and claims to hold the balance of power in the selection of six United States senators. There will be 44 alliance men in the new congress. The Alliance is semi-secret in its workings and bars certain professions and trades from membership. The following classes are ineligible: Bankers, merchants, brokers, commission dealers, buyers of cotton, grain and produce, lawyers, city doctors, preachers and school teachers, land and book agents, canvassers, ivory-stable keepers, speculators and gamblers. To this list of eligibles ought to be added professional politicians.

Appointed Associate Justice.

Judge Henry B. Brown, of Detroit, Michigan, appointed associate justice of the supreme court of the United States by President Harrison Tuesday, was born in Massachusetts; graduated from Yale in 1856. After extensive travels he began the study of law, and in 1859 came to Detroit and began practice. From 1861 to 1868 he was assistant United States district attorney for the eastern district of Michigan. In the latter year Governor Croker made him Judge of Wayne circuit court. In 1875 President Grant appointed him United States district Judge of the eastern district of Michigan.

We supposed the editor of the Register had become reconciled to the fact that the intelligence, patriotism and property interests of the Southern States ruled their elections. He should read the history of the carpetbag administrations before condemning those people for protecting their homes and firesides by every legitimate means within their reach. The black man is protected in his liberties, but he will not be allowed to wreck his own and the whites' prosperity and happiness. Sentimentalism may weep crocodile tears over these cold facts, but the white race will rule until in the course of events the negro advances materially in education and intelligence, when a divided responsibility will be obtained.

It is said that twice will be much cheaper this season than last, on account of the effort of cordage manufacturers to secure cheaper material. Of course this little statement is put out for the purpose of covering up the beneficial effects of putting the raw material on the free list, and reducing the duty on binding twine from two and a half to seven-tenths cents per pound. What is it that enables the manufacturer to get cheaper raw material? Simply the fact that it is put on the free list. Let us render, therefore, unto Caesar, the things that are Caesar's.

Natural gas appears to be diminishing in quantity in the eastern states especially in the vicinities of the cities of Pittsburg, Columbus and Indianapolis, where hundreds of factories have been using it as a fuel for their engines and are now obliged to use other fuel as the supply has been shut off. Superintendents of various natural gas companies are uncertain whether the future supply is entirely exhausted, or that for a short time it will be limited, but the majority incline to the belief that there will never be an abundant supply again.

Highly important to the people of the state, especially those residing outside of cities, is the matter of good roads in the state, and the movement inaugurated by the county judges and commissioners of Multnomah and Yamhill counties inviting a convention of commissioners from all the counties to meet in Portland on the second of January next, to prepare recommendations to the legislature, is very commendable, and there should be a large representation, that plans may be agreed upon and given to the law makers as guides for their action.

One of the most humorous missives of the year is the proclamation of the governor of equatorial Africa, addressed to Maine and other missionaries, "that climatic conditions in Sierra Leone are not at all suitable for believers in faith cure" and that hereafter "missionaries must employ a doctor."

Oregonian Railway News.

The Sunday Oregonian has the following items: It is now said to be only a question of time when the Oregonian road will be extended from Silverton into Portland. The plan was to build the first ten miles out of Portland this fall, but this was given up, owing perhaps for one thing to the tightness of the money market. The route the road is to follow has all been decided upon, except between East Portland and Pleasant valley.

Superintendent C. N. Scott, of the Oregonian railroad lines, is back from the completion of the widening of the company's east side narrow gauge to standard. The road is now running full blast, and the cars of all nations on its tracks, moving out the wheat, flour and other products of the rich region through which it runs. The narrow gauge rolling stock has nearly all been brought over the steel bridge and taken up to Dundee, where it will be overhauled at the company's shops. Some ninety-seven cars will be rehabilitated and put to work on the west side line.

Mr. Goodale, the sawmill man, was in town yesterday. He has four saw mills, one each at Coburg and Harrisburg, another on the McKenzie, and another on the Mohawk. Three of them are now running night and day on the timbers for the Oregonian's bridge over the McKenzie, which will enable the road to make connections at Springfield. Mr. Goodale thinks he can have all the timbers ready by the last of this month. Most of it is of the heaviest sort, being required for the 250-foot Howe truss.

Jacksonville Times: It is announced that Crawford, Howell & Co. are unable to proceed with the building of the Jacksonville-Medford railroad and have abandoned their contract. Several carloads of rails are at Medford, but, as the freight on them was not paid, the railroad company would not deliver them. This, of course, blocked operations. Mr. Honeyman, of Honeyman, DeHart & Co., Portland, who furnished the rails here, and it is probable that arrangements will be made to complete the road. Crawford, Howell & Co. have spent a very small amount of money, not having paid anybody or anything. How they expect to build this road without employing some capital of their own is a mystery.

The Crown paper mill turns out daily four tons of excellent straw paper, for which there is constant demand in Portland and San Francisco. The machinery runs as slick as a whistle. When the fractional parts of the machinery yet lacking arrive from the east, the manufacture of straw board will begin, which will increase the output of the mill to twelve tons daily, and make it a money-making establishment of the first order. The building of the paper mill of the W. P. & P. Co. is about completed. Twelve iron cylinders, four feet in diameter, and six feet in length, and other parts of the machinery for making paper are now under its roof.—Oregon City Courier.

Special Notice. Recognizing the signs of the times, and paying heed thereto, we must come to the conclusion, that we are fast drifting to a Cash Basis in the Retailing of Merchandise. Cash Down, means small profits. Long Time, large profits. At the end of 12 months the small profits on Cash Sales, makes a much better showing for the merchant, and the Customer has probably saved many more dollars than he is aware of, and to which he is rightly entitled to when buying for Cash. Viewing these facts in their proper light, I propose from this date on to make all my goods with two selling prices, one for cash and one for credit. Not that I don't wish to accommodate my old customers who are not always prepared to pay down for everything, for on the contrary I shall always give them terms and prices as favorable as they are able to obtain from anyone else and give them as well as to others the benefit of any cash purchase they wish to make. For, be it understood, my cash price does not mean higher profits for credit than formerly but great reduction for prompt payments. A. V. PETERS.
