Directly in front of me was a faro table, and presently I forgot my annoyance in watching a little scene which was in progress there. The players were mostly gamblers, I judged, from their pallor and the indescribable car marks of the profession, but among them, playing his money rather recklessly, was another stamp of a man. He was a brawny, thick set fellow, with the hands of a coa heaver and a curiously innocent looking face, in spite of the bushy beard that covered most of it. This player was in bad luck and palpably nervous. He moved his bets in a hesitating, half hearted sort of way, and muttered under his breath and swallowed in his throat when he lost, as he repeatedly did. In a few moments his last chip was gone, and, pushing back his chair, he leaned over the table and said something I could not catch, pointing to the silver box from which the cards were dealt.

"You're crazy," exclaimed the dealer loudly, half rising.

What followed happened all in a flash. The thick set man reached over, seized the box and held it to the light. Whether he discovered some unfair mechanism I do not know, but he wheeled with an oath and dashed it into the dealer's face. A roar of excitement rose from the crowd Cancer of Womb Cured Without Pain. The hammer of the pistol, like all those of large caliber, terminated in a point, which strikes the cartridge in the center. Over this point a file had been drawn, taking off about the thickness of a card; not enough to be seen, but enough to prevent it from touching the shell. This completely disabled the weapon, yet left it, to all outward appearances, in perfect order, and was in fact a devilish piece of ingenuity.

Photographing a Pork Packer. When this distinguished gentleman came to have his picture taken he didn't know exactly what he wanted, he said that he thought he preferred something that would set off his good points to the best advantage, he had not had a picture made since the days of ambrotypes, and he was determined now to get the best, no matter how much it cost. I asked him how he'd like to try a dozen of "inspirations," and he said "Let 'er go, Gallagher" So I set him down at the little table and made him rest his right elbow on a copy of Shakespeare's plays, with his hand gracefully supporting his head. In his lap I placed another book, upon which I rested his left hand carelessly "Now, look up, toward the ceiling," said I, "and try to look expectant" "What's that?" he asked "As if you were looking for a sorner in lard," says 1 "Oh, I see," says he, and he rolled up his eyes beautifully. "Don't miss the diamond," says he; "I paid a heap for it and wouldn't swap it for the best herd in Texas."

"Now the result," continued the pro-fessor, "was that I got a splendid nega-tive. The pork packer's daughter was delighted. "Oh, papa, how perfectly lovely!" she cried. I never saw you look so sweet before!' Of course not If I'd wanted to get a characteristic picture of this man I'd have to set him in chair and make him tilt the chair back. stuff his hands into his trousers pockets, and put a chew of tobacco into his mouth That would have been nature. The London police force, like all the institutions of that vast metropolis, is arranged upon a gigantic plan. The super intendents, inspectors, sergeants and constables make up an army 13,800 strong -a truly formidable force, but none too large when it is considered that the metropolitan police district extends over a radius of fifteen miles from Charing Cross, exclusive of the city of London and its liberties, and embraces an area of 688 square miles, of a ratable value of £33,-800,000 per year. The Bull and the Band.

The village of Strinesville has a new brass band it played its first piece the other day, considerately going some distance out of the village to do it. That delicate consideration probably saved the life of a Strinesville small boy, but it killed Farmer Stauffer's valuable young Jersey bull. At the time the band went out to play the bull was feeding in its pasture, which was near the spot chosen by the band. While the band was getting its band. collective lip ready to compel a tune from its borns, the small boy referred to was taking a short cut through the pasture to reach the band The bull took note of the small boy's presence, and proceeded at once to hasten his trip across the lot The band had not seen the procession moving through the meadow, although the bull was mouthing his displeasure lustily as he ran, and the small boy was lifting up his voice in audible and pene-trating tones. The bull was within three jumps of the boy when the band had got ready to play The band played. At the first burst the bull stopped short, threw up his head and sniffed the air. The in struments blared again. The bull turned and rushed wildly toward the stone wall The band threw its soul once more into its horns, and the bull sprang over the wall. He came down on his head on the other side and broke his neck.—Harris burg (Pa.) Cor. New York Sun.

Diseases Have Special Seasons

While it appears from the records of English health officers that some diseases have special seasons in which they are most likely to prevail, it is not shown that occasional variations in temperature have much influence in the matter Scariet fever is at its minimum from January to May, and at its maximum in October and November Diphtheria is more evenly distributed through the year, and is most dangerous a little later than scarlet fever Measies and whooping cough seem to be somewhat aggravated by cold weather, but are most fatal in May and June Hot weather is averse to smallpox and favora ble to disorders of the bowels.
