AUNT MAG'S" FUNERAL.

THE COWBOY'S GENUINE GRIEF AND DELICACY OF FEELING.

Much has been written regarding cowboy life on the plains, and much of that writing has been so magnified that the unsophisticated are led to believe that the cowboy is a veritable terror, whose glory lies in riotous conduct and termi-nating the existence of fellow beings. Such belief is exceedingly erroneous, for, aside from many other noble traits, the cowboy has a heart as sympathetic as a female. This was demonstrated just the other day, when Long Tom Leiter and his gang were herding cattle about thirty miles to the north of this little place, in the region of the Musselshell river, writes a correspondent from Livingstone, M. T. Leiter is a New Yorker, and came to the northwest some years ago with his wife and mother. Every cow puncher on the plains knew "Aunt Mag," as Long Tom's mother was familiarly known. She al-ways had a kind word for them, and her devout Christianity had won respect from every one who had ever struck Long Tom's ranch. Leiter's lengthy form had em if they've come—with Dr. given him the sobriquet of Long Tom. and he had worked his way up from a common herder to captain of a gang.

"AUNT MAG'S DEAD."

One day he was in the vicinity of Musselshell with a heavy herd bound for Billings. Night was drawing near, and the boys had just got themselves ready to ride down the cattle and go into camp. Away to the west appeared a horse head-ing for the herd. Although not more than fairly outlined as a horse. Long Tom knew the animal, an extra he had at the for the night Morton, who had been assigned to take charge of the gang, called the men together. Morton comes from some place in Ohio near Hudson, in the Western reserve, and is a college grad-uate. The reaming life of the cowbov fascinated him, and he's discarded his diploma for a larint.

"Boys," he said, "we've got to do some-thing. Here's Tom out here away from civilization, with his mother dead, and Aunt Mag was a noble woman." His emotion choked back anything further he desired to say.

Dawn was just breaking when Jersey Bill showed up with a neat, cloth covered coffin, which was taken to Leiter's ranch at once. Long Tom was stunned, as he was just preparing to start on a mission similar to that of Jersey Bill. The remains of Aunt Mag were tenderly placed in the coffin by Mrs. Leiter and her husband. That afternoon a burial took placesuch a burial as seldom occurs. Willing hands had dug a grave on a knoll north of Leiter's cabin. The pastor, pall bearers and mourners were cowboys, and the sympathy there manifested came from deep down in the heart. Prior to depositing the coffined form of all that was mortal of Aunt Mag in the grave, Morton made brief remarks, eulogizing the good deeds of the deceased. Every head in the group that stood around the grave was uncovered and the lashes of every eye glistened with moisture. Drops of liquid crystal rolled down Jersey Bill's cheeks as he stooped over to aid in de-positing the coffin in the grave. Although devoid of the pomp and formality of a funeral in the midst of civilization, no more sincere, sorrowing mourners ever gathered around a bier than the crowd of cowboys that laid Aunt Mag to rest.—Chicago Herald.

In just one week from the time the steamer Dispatch left him on board the sloop he was back in Semiahmoo, arriving on New Year's Day, much to the gratification of his friends, who had given him up for lost.—Blaine (W.
